MEDIA RELEASE

On October 18, 2012 a Sacramento State student was defrauded out of a large amount of money by a male and a female, both in their 20’s. The male subject, who was a Black male with thin, waist-length dreadlocks, approached the victim as he was walking in parking lot 7 and convinced the victim that the subject’s sister had been in an automobile accident and the person who hit her had written her a personal check to pay for the damages. The subjects further convinced the victim that they needed him to cash the check for them, for which he would be paid $30. The female subject (pictured) accompanied the victim to his bank where the victim cashed the check, handed the cash over and then all parties separated. The check was fraudulent and the victim is being held responsible by the bank.
