JUSTIFICATION:

Justification for Approval for Substantive Change to an Existing Program: The College of Continuing Education offered the original DPS Certificate Program in October 1999 via the College of Education's Counselor Education Department. However, for numerous reasons, e.g., staffing concerns, personnel changes, and the inability to offer classes in identified geographic areas, the program was discontinued approximately three years ago. The College of Continuing Education staff completely revamped the DPS Certificate Program and changed the program focus from a "counseling perspective" to one that focuses on empowering SB 65 Outreach Consultants and other school staff so they are better prepared to work with students and classroom teachers to lower the dropout rate. In addition, the instructional delivery methodology was changed from a classroom, face-to-face format to one that is delivered to students via a series of four, 3-unit classes that are delivered primarily on-line.

Justification to Change the DPS Certificate Program from the Department of Counselor Education to the Department of Teacher Education: The original Dropout Prevention Specialist (DPS) Certificate Program was originally offered through the Department of Counselor Education because its comprehensive counseling component; however, as previously stated, the revised program focuses on empowering SB 65 Outreach Consultants and other school staff so they are better prepared to work with students and classroom teachers to lower the dropout rate.
