JUSTIFICATION:

White collar and financial crime represents a significant threat to the economy and consumes a substantial portion of criminal justice resources. We currently have no undergraduate course in this area. Demand for this course has been strong.

NEW COURSE DESCRIPTION: (Not to exceed 80 words, and language should conform to catalog copy. See <http://www.cs.us.edu/acaf/univmanual/crspsl.htm> - Guidelines for Catalog Course Description)

Course introduces students to a variety of white collar crime issues, including definitional complexities, the causes, frequency and impact of economic crime, and victim and offender profiles. Governmental corruption, organizational fraud, consumer and environmental offenses, anti-trust violations and international schemes will be covered. Students will also become familiar with the methods used to investigate, prosecute and sentence white collar offenders. Policy considerations will be discussed for controlling national and international white collar crime.

Description of the Expected Learning Outcomes: Describe outcomes using the following format: "Students will be able to: 1), 2), etc." See the example at <http://www.csus.edu/acaf/example.htm>

Upon successful completion of the course the student will be able to:

1. Define white collar crime, distinguish it from other types of crime and be familiar with the difficulty in measuring the occurrence of these offenses and their associated costs.
2. Explain the types of conduct constituting white collar offenses by exploring various historical precedents.
3. Be familiar with various theories for the causes of white collar crime on both the individual and organizational levels.
4. Analyze the complexities of investigating and prosecuting white collar offenders by examining hypothetical fraud and corruption schemes.
5. Explain the far ranging impact of white collar crime, particularly with reference to globalization, international monetary markets and state-corporate complicity in illegal conduct.
6. Describe various policy and legislative initiatives for combating white collar crime and the resulting ethical considerations flowing from the initiatives.

*Attach a list of the required/recommended course readings and activities [Note: it is understood that these are updated and modified as needed by the instructor(s).] This attachment should be forwarded only to your Dean's office, not Academic Affairs.

Assessment Strategies: A description of the assessment strategies (e.g., portfolios, examinations, performances, pre-and post-tests, conferences with students, student papers) which will be used by the instructor to determine the extent to which students have achieved the learning outcomes noted above:

Assessment Strategies: Students will be graded on the basis of their participation in classroom discussions, their written responses to questions presented by the case studies, a mid-term, a final exam as well as maintenance of a white collar crime journal.

A. Students will be required to prepare written responses to questions posed from two different case studies during the semester. The typed responses must be 500 to 750 words and double spaced. Additional research to answer the questions is encouraged, but outside sources must be properly cited.

B. Students will be required to keep a weekly journal compiling articles relating to any aspect of white collar crime from a newspaper or magazine. Students must also type a written reaction to the article, approximately 250 words. The student's reaction may address issues, concepts and principles of white collar crime that are addressed in the course. The article selected may include stories about offenders, crimes, prosecutions and/or sanctions. Each week, two students will be selected in the class to review their weekly white collar journal entries. All students will be required to report on their journal entries at least once during the semester. The journal should be maintained in a binder which contains the articles and the student reactions for each week of class. The journal will be collected at the end of the semester for grading purposes.

Required Text

1. Trusted Criminals: White Collar Crime In Contemporary Society, 2nd Edition, by David O. Friedrichs

Required Readings

Students will also be responsible for various outside readings that will be assigned two weeks prior to class discussion. Additional readings may be distributed in class.

Course Description

“CRJ 151. White Collar Crime. Course introduces students to a variety of white collar crime issues, including definitional complexities, the causes, frequency and impact of economic crime, and victim and offender profiles. Governmental corruption, organizational fraud, consumer and environmental offenses, anti-trust violations and international schemes will be covered. Students will also become familiar with the methods used to investigate, prosecute and sentence white collar offenders. Policy considerations will be discussed for controlling national and international white collar crime.

Goals and Objectives

Upon successful completion of the course the student will be able to:

1. Define white collar crime, distinguish it from other types of crime and be familiar with the difficulty in measuring the occurrence of these offenses and their associated costs.
2. Explain the types of conduct constituting white collar offenses by exploring various historical precedents.
3. Be familiar with various theories for the causes of white collar crime on both the individual and organizational levels.
4. Analyze the complexities of investigating and prosecuting white collar offenders by examining hypothetical fraud and corruption schemes.
5. Explain the far ranging impact of white collar crime, particularly with reference to globalization, international monetary markets and state-corporate complicity in illegal conduct.
6. Describe various policy and legislative initiatives for combating white collar crime and the resulting ethical considerations flowing from the initiatives.

Course Methodology

This course will be taught in a seminar format with extensive class discussion, reliance on case studies, outside reading and contemporary cases of white collar crime interest. Lectures may include the use of power-point presentations and overheads. Guest speakers will provide students with practical realities regarding the investigation and prosecution of white collar crime.

Student Evaluation

Students will be graded on the basis of their participation in classroom discussions, their written responses to questions presented by the case studies, a mid-term, a final exam as well as maintenance of a white collar crime journal.

A. Students will be required to prepare written responses to questions posed from two different case studies during the semester. The typed responses must be 500 to 750 words and double spaced. Additional research to answer the questions is encouraged, but outside sources must be properly cited.

B. Students will be required to keep a weekly journal, consisting of an article covering any aspect of white collar crime from a newspaper or magazine. Students must also type a written reaction to the article, approximately 250 words. The student's reaction may address issues, concepts and principles of white collar crime that are addressed in the course. The article selected may include stories about offenders, crimes, prosecutions and/or sanctions. Each week, two students will be selected in the class to review their weekly white collar journal entries. All students will be required to report on their journal entries at least once during the semester. The journal should be maintained in a binder which contains the articles and the student reactions for each week of class. The journal will be collected at the end of the semester for grading purposes.

Attendance and Participation

This course will involve a great deal of class discussion. As such, attendance and participation in class will represent a portion of your grade. I expect all students to be prepared to discuss each assigned reading prior to class.
