JUSTIFICATION:
Limited graduate coursework exists for training that covers adults with learning disabilities (LD) and the need for collaboration. Professional training is critically needed to meet the complex social, emotional and psychological issues of adults with LD. This class will incorporate key aspects from two previous courses to provide the framework and basic foundational underpinnings for other courses offered in the Certificate Program in Adult Learning Disabilities. This combined content will provide an opportunity to expand the understanding of the unique disability-related personal issues of the adult with LD.

NEW COURSE DESCRIPTION: (Not to exceed 80 words, and language should conform to catalog copy. See http://www.csus.edu/acaf/univmanual/crpsl.htm - Guidelines for Catalog Course Description)

Explore and analyze the most common social, emotional and psychological problems of adults with learning disabilities (LD) impacting cognition and learning. Topics include: current definitions, characteristics of learning disabilities (LD), the impact of dual diagnosis, and the collaborative role of the LD specialist regarding issues of professional conduct, ethics, and legality. Differences will be examined between LD and other disability categories such as Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD), Acquired Brain Injury (ABI), Developmentally Delayed Learners (DDL), etc.

Description of the Expected Learning Outcomes: Describe outcomes using the following format: “Students will be able to: 1), 2), etc.” See the example at http://www.csus.edu/acaf/example.htm

Upon completion, participants will be able to:
1. Operationally define adult learning disabilities and list the characteristics that identify adults with LD.
2. Define and describe the most common social, emotional and psychological difficulties of adults with learning disabilities (LD).
3. Compare and contrast the symptoms of other disorders with the characteristic symptoms of learning disabilities.
4. Analyze and discuss recent neurobiological, genetic and cognitive learning theories as they relate to learning disabilities.
5. Identify appropriate campus and community referral sources.
6. Demonstrate knowledge of collaboration skills with programs on and off the college campus.
7. Define and examine the collaborative role of the LD specialist focusing on professional functions and boundaries regarding ethical behavior and legal standards.
