If different amounts of credit will be available for the proposed course, indicate differences in course requirements for earning the units. NA

If the course can be taken more than one time for credit, what is the justification for the repetition? How will the two (or more) experiences differ? NA

What courses currently offered in Arts and Letters or other colleges/departments most closely resemble the proposed course? Please list these other courses and justify why the proposed course will not duplicate them. Not all approved courses are shown in the current catalog so please consult faculty/chair in other schools/departments where duplication might occur. Please list persons you consulted.

1. PHIL 122: Political Philosophy– Phil 190R goes into much more depth on Rawls than PHIL 122

2. GOVT 119: Specialized Studies in Political Theory- PHIL 190R focuses on philosophical issues, not social science
Can the course be implemented within the existing departmental allocation? Yes
If the proposed course will require an expenditure of $100 or more, append a breakdown of expenditure and source of funding.

If this is a new course, how will it be integrated into your present allocation:
1. Will you be giving up another course to make room for the proposed course?
   No. At least one 190-level course is offered every semester.
2. What course(s) could you alternate in the schedule with the proposed course?
   Other 190-level courses.
3. How often would you schedule the proposed course?
   One time.
4. What full-time faculty can teach the course? What other course would they give up in order to teach it?
   Anderson and Bellon. Anderson would give up PHIL 21, which can be taught by many of our faculty.
5. Realistically, what fiscal impact might the proposed course have? (e.g., operating expense, faculty cost, staff cost, student assistants, equipment, etc.)
   The course would consume no more resources than a typical 3-unit upper-division philosophy course.

List the objectives/goals/expected learning outcomes.
- An improved understanding of how social institutions can be justified.
- A better understanding of the competing theories of justice.

What student assessment tools will be used? (e.g., exams, papers, portfolios.)
- Three essay papers.
- One or more short in-class oral presentations.

In addition to filling out the Check-Off List form, please submit a course syllabus containing the following information:

I. Course Content and Objectives
   (Brief discursive overview of major topics and goals)

II. Required Texts
   (e.g., textbooks, class handouts, journals, newspapers, web pages, videos, etc.)

III. Course Format
   (e.g., lecture, lecture-discussion, seminar, composition, activities, studio, etc.)
IV. Course Requirements
   A. Class Participation
   B. Examinations
   C. Research Paper or Term Project or Short Papers, etc.
   D. Attendance
   E. Other Policies

V. Student Evaluation: How are the requirements in IV weighted in determining the course grade? (e.g., attendance 10%, midterm 23%, etc.)

VI. Semester Outline
   (Course topics ordered weekly)

PHILOSOPHY 192R
SEMINAR ON JOHN RAWLS’ A THEORY OF JUSTICE
FALL 09

COURSE DESCRIPTION: Before Rawls’ published his landmark work, A Theory of Justice in 1972, the field of political philosophy had been in the doldrums for quite some time. Rawls’ work revitalized it. He shifted the focus of the subject (in English-speaking countries at least) away from the then-dominant utilitarian tradition to a more kantian, social-contract basis for a legitimate state. For Rawls, the primary responsibility of the state is not to maximize public happiness or well-being, as the utilitarians maintained, but to ensure justice. Our task will be to work through Rawls’ great work. It is a lengthy (600 pages), densely argued work; more than enough to occupy us for fifteen weeks. Frequent reference will be made to some of the many critical books and papers that Theory of Justice has given rise to as sources of paper topics. For the student who wants to understand contemporary political philosophy, Rawls’ work is the place to begin.

COURSE OBJECTIVES: A careful reading of Rawls’ Theory of Justice should leave the student well-situated to follow the exiting contemporary debate on the structure of the just state. He or she can also expect to have improved their skills at writing a clear, argumentative essay that a reader who has not taken the course could readily understand.

PREREQUISITES: Upper-division standing, with some background in analytical philosophy.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS AND GRADING: Three 7-10 page analytical papers worth 25% of the grade each. The remainder of the grade will be based on class participation in the discussions as well as periodic brief (5-10 minute) oral presentations on some particular aspect of Rawl’s work. Departmental guidelines for writing assignments in a philosophy course are available at http://www.csus.edu/phil/req/grading.htm.

TOPICS AND ORDER OF READINGS: Rawls’ work is divided into three main parts labelled “Theory”, “Institutions” and “Ends”, each part having three chapters. Parts One and Two have occasioned the most commentary and are the most philosophically challenging, so we will plan on spending about two weeks on each of the first six chapters, leaving us (unfortunately) just one week for each of the last three chapters. Some adjustments can be made depending on the classes’ interests and whatever turns out to be most challenging.
Weeks 1 &2: Chapter I. Justice as Fairness
Weeks 3 & 4: Chapter II. The Principles of Justice
Weeks 5 &6: Chapter III. The Original Position
Weeks 7&8: Chapter IV. Equal Liberty
Weeks 9 & 10: Chapter V. Distributive Shares
Weeks 11 & 12: Chapter VI. Duty and Obligation
Week 13: Chapter VII. Goodness as Rationality
Week 14: Chapter VIII. The Sense of Justice
Week 15: Chapter IX. The Good of Justice; overall summary of Rawl’s achievement.
