

Campus to open newest building

The latest in the expansion effort underway at CSUS will be on display Tuesday, May 11 when the campus' new building – Modoc Hall – opens. The 85,000 square-foot building at the south end of campus is a joint project of the University and the U. S. Geological Survey. CSUS President Alexander Gonzalez and USGS Director Charles Groat will dedicate the building during a private ceremony. A public reception, open house and building tours will follow from 11:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The day concludes with the University's annual Outstanding Scholarly Achievement Award lecture by engineering professor Jose Granda at 4 p.m. on the first floor of Modoc. For more information on Granda's talk see the story below.

The new space represents a major boost for the University's research efforts, increasing student access to first-hand research with working scientists. Building on a successful relationship established with the construction of Placer Hall in 1996, Modoc Hall will bring additional offices of the U.S Geological Survey to campus. The building will also house the University's Office of Water Programs offices and labs along with campus offices that coordinate funding and processing for research projects.

"Modoc Hall is a perfect example of what can happen when agencies work together," says CSUS President Alexander Gonzalez. "The University's partnership with the USGS brings opportunities to our students that they wouldn't get anywhere else, opportunities to work side-by-side with USGS scientists to solve challenges

MODOC OPENING – Though some tenants – such as Research and Sponsored Projects, the Office of Water Programs and Grants and Contracts – have already begun to settle in, the campus at-large can check out the newest addition to the campus landscape with the grand opening of Modoc Hall on Tuesday, May 11. Visitors are invited to an open house and building tours from 11:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Students turn out to support multi-use center

In the largest voter turnout in ASI election history, CSUS students approved a fee increase to fund the proposed Wellness/ Recreation/Events Center. After a long, long night of waiting – the final vote tally came at nearly 5 a.m. – the campus community learned Thursday that the measure passed with 55.2 percent of the vote. Nearly 5,000 students went to the polls for the election which also selected student government officers for the 2004-05 academic year.

"It's a great day to be a Hornet at Sacramento State," said ASI President Peter Ucovich at a news conference announcing the vote. "It's an example of what we can do when we work together. Students, faculty, staff and administrators all came together."

CSUS President Alexander Gonzalez said the affirmative vote was a sign the students are on board with the concept of making CSUS into a "flagship campus."

Granda receives Scholarly Achievement Award

Jose Granda, whose computer modeling techniques have landed him research scholar positions with NASA during the last two summers, is the recipient of this year's Outstanding Scholarly Achievement Award at CSUS.

Granda is a professor of mechanical engineering. He'll receive his award at an event at the University's new Modoc Hall at 4 p.m., Tuesday, May 11, where he'll give a lecture on "Modeling and simulation technologies for understanding the International Space Station and airplanes of the future."

Granda's work is focused on methods of automatically generating mathematical code for advanced simulation software using Bond Graph technology. Such methods give engineers a quicker, easier way to test ideas and understand how dynamic systems work before a single part is manufactured. Granda and his students use software he has designed and improved over the last two decades called CAMP-G (Computer Aided Modeling Program with Graphical Input).

Granda is currently working on a model of NASA's Assembly Flight 12A, a planned space shuttle mission. The task is to make sure the space station remains stable as new components are added, during docking with the Space Shuttle and

Your opinion counts: What's our name?

What is in a name? A little confusion when it comes to California State University, Sacramento.

Routinely media, alumni, students and members of the community use six or seven variations when they refer to campus. So the University is reaching out to solve the dilemma by asking people to vote on their favorite everyday name.

Inquiries about the appropriate use of the campus name are frequent, but the answer is complicated. "California State University, Sacramento" is the official name and is currently always used on first or formal references. It's common practice on second reference to use "CSUS," or "Sac State" as an affectionate nickname. The use of "Sacramento State" was approved in 2000 for use by and in reference to Intercollegiate Athletics, but not for the general campus. Other variations also crop up from time to time such as "CSU Sacramento," "Cal State Sacramento" and the "Capital University."

In an attempt to clarify the confusion, the University is undertaking an opinion survey over the summer. To vote, either clip the ballot in the Bulletin and send it to the public affairs office at campus zip 6026 or log onto the web at www.csus.edu/ name. If you have further opinions, they may be sent to infodesk@csus.edu. Students will be randomly selected to vote on the top four contenders during registration. Community input will be sought on the website and at events such as the Olympic Trials and commencement.

Historically, the campus was known as "Sacramento State College" or as "SSC," "Sacramento State" or "Sac State" for short. When the California State University system came into being in 1972, many people wanted to be "Sacramento State University" or just "Sacramento State." However, the distinction of becoming a university was widely embraced and the name changed to fit the situation.

The campuses of the new CSU moved toward a standard nomenclature, except the two

The CSUS Bulletin welcomes submissions to the Professional Activities Section from faculty, administration and staff. Items are run on a space available basis. They should be no longer than 75 words and may be submitted to bulletin@csus.edu or faxed to 278-5290.

students

The student ASCE CONCRETE CANOE TEAM won first place overall in the recent Mid-Pacific Conference regional competitions at the University of Nevada, Reno. The team took first place in several categories including oral presentation, design paper, and final product. The team took second in overall canoe races and also won the "Spirit Award" and placed fourth in the steel bridge competition. The winning team will represent the Mid-Pacific Region in the national competition in Washington D.C.

grants

ERNEST UWAZIE, criminal justice, has been awarded a $68,000 grant by the Fulbright-Hays Group Projects Abroad Program.

recognition

TIMI ROSS POEPELMAN, communication studies, was awarded the "Lifelong Learning Award" by KVIE on April 14 for the last seven years of learning service projects that she required her students to complete at KVIE.

LOUISE TIMMER, nursing, has been elected president of the American Nurses Association of California (ANAC) for the term 2004-2007.

HARRIET TANIGUCHI has been formally appointed as assistant vice president for academic affairs, student academic support and educational equity programs.

scholarship

STAN DUNDON, philosophy, and ROBERT PLATZNER, humanities and religious studies, were the principal presenters at a Forum on Interfaith Dialogue, sponsored by the Sacramento Catholic Diocese and the Jewish Community Relations Council, held at the Newman Center on April 14. They talked about Mel Gibson's "The Passion of the Christ" and its impact on Jewish-Christian relations.

DOMAN LUM, social work, has coauthored two chapters, "Developing an Integrated Model of Cultural Competence in Social Work Education," and "Multicultural Social Work Education: Themes and Recommendations," that appear in a new book, Education for Multicultural Social Work Practice: Critical Viewpoints and Future Directions.

ROBERT G. MOGULL, management information science, had his studies "County Poverty: The Case of Sacramento" published in The Journal of Applied Business Research in Spring 2004 and "Estimating and Projecting State Poverty: The Case of Mississippi" in The Journal of Business and Economic Perspectives for Fall/Winter 2003. He also had accepted his studies "County Poverty: The Case of Los Angeles" in The Journal of Business and Economics Research and "State Poverty: The Case of California" in The Journal of Social Service Research. His study "County Poverty: The Case of Sacramento" was discussed in an article by Dan Walters, columnist for the Sacramento Bee, on April 4. Mogull also served as a reviewer for The Journal of Business and Economic Perspectives.

MARILYN HOPKINS and PATRICIA CLARK-ELLIS, College of Health and Human Services, presented a poster titled "Creating a Supportive Matrix for New Faculty" in April at the 2004 American Association of Higher Education National Learning to Change Conference.

MARK BIERNBAUM, child development, will have an article about school readiness published in the National Head Start Association's Dialog in June.

JAN ANDERSEN, family and consumer sciences, had an article titled "An Electronic Leap: Quizzes on the Web" published in the March issue of The Teaching Professor.

PAUL GOLDSTONE, government emeritus, will have a review of Keith W. Olson's Watergate: The Presidential Scandal that Shook America published in the fall 2004 issue of the Journal of Third World Studies. Goldstone was also elected to the board of directors of the American Civil Liberties Union of Yolo County in November and was listed in Who's Who in America for 2003.

TED LASCHER, public policy and administration, had an article titled "Constituency Size and Incumbent Safety: A Reexamina-tion" accepted for publication by Political Research Quarterly, the journal of the Western Political Science Association.

BILL OWEN, communication studies, has published three haibun in the annual Contemporary Haibun, volume 5, 2004.

LINDA BUCKLEY, academic affairs, and LORI VARLOTTA, student affairs, presented a workshop at the annual WASC Conference in San Jose on April 15 titled "A Strategic Planning Approach to the WASC Reaccreditation Process."

MARK BIERNBAUM, child development, and SHERRI CARINCI, teacher education, will present a workshop on "(En)gendering Educators: Gender Ideologies and Education" at the 2nd annual International Conference on Teacher Education and Social Justice, July 23-25 in San Francisco.

NANCY SHULOCK, public policy and administration, has been invited to deliver expert testimony in Washington, D.C. to the National Commission on Accountability in Higher Education, a group initiated by the State Higher Education Executive Officers and supported by the Ford Foundation.

Please help us decide.

We were founded in 1947 as "Sacramento State College." Later we were officially renamed "California State University, Sacramento," and that will remain our official name. What we need is a consistent name for everyday use – like a "William" is often called "Bill." There are many possibilities, and currently many are used, which causes confusion.

We are conducting an opinion survey to help decide which variation of our name should be used.

Employees honored for years of service

More than 130 employees were honored for their years of service to the University at the annual USA Staff Awards Luncheon last week. The event recognizes CSUS staff and administrators as well as employees of Associated Students and the CSUS Foundation for 10, 15, 20, 25 and 35 years of service.

Among those recognized were two who have worked at CSUS for 35 years: Roy C. Almeda, custodial services and Elaine Maeda, English.

Honorees who have been at the University 10, 15 or 20 years received a pin in the shape of the Guy West Bridge. Employees recognized for 25, 30 or 35 years were presented with an engraved plaque or other award.

Name

Cal Polys. The five colleges that did not meet the criteria as universities were expected to eventually convert "college" to "university," so that all but the two Cal Polys would be California State University, (location).

However, several of the campuses sought legislative action to allow them to use a variant with the name of the locale and State University. These included Humboldt, San Diego, San Francisco and San José. Then in 1976, Sonoma sought and gained a similar exemption.

CSU names are set by statute or legislative exemption. However, the Chancellor's Office does have an "officially requested" everyday name list. This campus currently appears on that list as CSUS or Sac State.

The decision to use CSUS on second reference was reached in the early 1980s despite the fact that CSU Stanislaus and Sonoma are in the same general area. The confusion with Stanislaus has been an ongoing issue.

In 1997 the use of Capital University, as a tagline was adopted in relation to the 50th anniversary celebrations. It is used to define and differentiate this campus from other CSUs in the state. For example, students may choose this campus rather than Chico, Sonoma or Stanislaus based on its proximity to state, federal and local government and related employment opportunities. The location in the capital also is reflected in special programmatic offerings such as the degree in government/journalism, the master's degree in public policy and administration and the Center for California Studies.

The "official" everyday name should be announced sometime in the fall.

New credit card policy

CSUS is implementing a new credit card policy that's expected to result in substantial savings in annual credit card handling fees.

Effective June 14, MasterCard, Discover and American Express will be accepted when paying by the web or telephone, but a 3.15 percent service charge will be added. Visa will no longer be accepted for payments on the web or telephone.

Credit cards will no longer be accepted for paying registration fees in person. Visa, MasterCard and Discover will be accepted in person for fees other than registration, such as parking or housing. Cash, checks, money orders or credit card convenience checks can be used with no service charge.

For more information regarding the new policy, contact Jeanette Norton in the student financial services center at 278-7433.

■ VP INTERVIEWS

Interviews have been scheduled for candidates for the position of vice president for student affairs. The campus community is invited to meet with the candidates at the times below. Written comments should be sent to David Wagner, vice president for human resources, by 5 p.m., Thursday, May 13 at wagnerdl@csus.edu.

- May 3, 2:30 to 3:30 p.m., University Union Walnut Room, Naomi Johnson, vice president for student affairs and student success at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania

- May 5, 1:30 to 2:30 p.m., University Union Valley Suite, Marysz Rames, dean of student affairs and assistant professor of education at South Dakota State University

- May 10, 1:30 to 2:30 p.m., University Union Walnut Room, Frederick Edmondson, associate vice president for student affairs and dean of students, CSU Stanislaus

- May 11, 1:30 to 2:30 p.m., University Union Walnut Room, Sandra Hubler, vice president for student affairs and enrollment management at Menlo College.

■ LEGISCHOOL GIFT

The Center for California Studies has received a $25,000 grant from AT&T for the LegiSchool Project. The funds money will help further LegiSchool's mission of providing civic education to California's high school students.

■ FACULTY SENATE ELECTION

The Faculty Senate reports that the following have been elected to the Judicial Review Board:

- Cecil Canton, criminal justice
- Peter Nwosu, communication studies
- Santos Torres, social work.

■ MIDDLE EAST TALK

Stephen Zunes, author of the 2003 book Tinderbox: U.S. Middle East Policy and the Roots of Terrorism, will give a talk titled "A Clash Of Interests: U.S. Foreign Policy and Human Rights in the Middle East" on Tuesday, May 4 in the University Union Hinde Auditorium.

Zunes is a professor at the University of San Francisco. He serves as Middle East editor for the Foreign Policy in Focus Project and was the project's senior policy analyst during his 2001-02 sabbatical year. He also serves an associate editor of Peace Review and as a research associate at the Center for Global, International and Regional Studies at UC Santa Cruz.

His talk will be followed by a question-and-answer session and book signing.

Winners named in literary competition

CSUS has named 16 graduate and undergraduate students winners of the 2004 Bazzanella Literary Awards.

First and second prizes were awarded in four areas: critical analysis, expository prose, poetry and short fiction. First prize winners received $200 and second prize winners $100. The winning submissions will be published in an upcoming booklet. This year's winners were:

- Critical analysis: Graduate, first place, Anna Lee McKennon; second place, Ann Wehrman. Undergraduate, first place, Leah Larsen; second place, Daniel Benson.

- Expository prose: Graduate, first place, Karen Embry; second place Jean Bricarello. Undergraduate, first place, Stacy Lucier; second place, David Purdy.

- Poetry: Graduate, first place, Karen Embry; second place, Tina Royer. Undergraduate, first place, Heather Judy; second place, Natasha Stanford.

- Short fiction: Graduate, first place, Ann Wehrman; second place, Patrick Lochelt. Undergraduate, first place, Jeremy Trimble; second place, Daniel Benson.

The awards are named after the late Dominic "Buzz" Bazzanella, a former CSUS professor of English and acting dean of the School of Arts and Sciences at the time of his death in 1978, and supported by the Angelo and Sofia Tsakopoulos Endowment Fund of the Sacramento Regional Foundation. They have been presented annually since 1979. The competition is open to all students currently enrolled at CSUS.

The winners will be honored at a reception at 6:30 p.m., Wednesday, May 12 in the University Union Foothill Suite.

Details: 278-7284.

The University's Office of Water Programs, a research and training endeavor that looks for solutions to California's water problems, will gain expanded facilities in the new building. In addition to providing courses in water treatment to busy professionals, the office's stormwater research group works with agencies such as CalTrans on issues relating to runoff.

Modoc will also be the new home for Grants and Contracts Administration as well as Research and Sponsored Projects. Bringing the two operations under the same roof will provide faculty centralized access to products and services.

The building is located near the campus' Folsom Blvd. entrance.

CUBA REVEALED

Cuba, a land so close to the United States yet so far away, will be the focus of an exclusive, one-day show of photographic works by Roberto Salas, who along with his late father Osvaldo has chronicled Cuba from Castro to Che to the present day. The show runs from 5 to 9 p.m., Saturday, May 8 on the first floor of Napa Hall. A reception will begin at 6 p.m.

"Cuba! A Photographic Retrospective" features more than 40 photos, the majority by Roberto, who will be present at the show, and six by his father. Included are images of Fidel Castro and Che Guevara from the 1950s and a large body of work depicting life in Cuba as seen through the lens of Roberto. The work spans five decades and also includes photos from Vietnam made by Roberto in the late 1960s and early 1970s. Four large color mosaic images by Roberto illustrate the new direction his art is taking.

Born in New York in 1940, Roberto Salas and his Cuban-born father were invited to Cuba by Castro in 1955 to work for the government newspaper Revolución. The pair were granted nearly unfettered access to revolutionary figures and events, and created an unparalleled photographic history of the times. The pair collaborated until Osvaldo's death in 1992. Roberto currently lives and works in Cuba, continuing to chronicle and create.

"It's a big win for our students. It's a big project. And it's going to be a big deal for Sacramento State," Gonzalez said. "We have a clear mandate from the students. This was not a squeaker - students came out in numbers in support."

Plans call for the 236,000 square-foot facility to be built near Hornet Stadium. Preliminary designs call for it to include a new student health center, fitness center, rock-climbing wall, swimming pool, athletic courts, six-lane bowling center, fitness classrooms, concession space, childcare center, conference center and an 8,000-seat arena for events such as commencement and intercollegiate athletics.

Students will initially pay an extra $10 per semester for planning and design of the center, and $110 per semester once construction has begun. President Gonzalez has pledged the University will raise $25 million. Construction could begin as soon as 2007 and be completed by 2008.

President Gonzalez added that now that the students have done their part, it's time for the community to do theirs. "Our next step is to develop the plan for raising money for the non-student-funded portion of the recreation center. The community needs to make a commitment financially ... to make the campus the best it can be.

"This is a very important key to our master plan. The vote is a clear signal we need to move this direction."

Plans for what will eventually go in the center will continue as well. The campus committee that brought the referendum forward will now begin the work of determining what the end result will be.

maneuvering operations. The summer of 2004 will be the third summer Granda will join the NASA Langley Research Center scientists and engineers as a faculty fellow.

NASA has also involved Granda in analyzing the dynamics of "morphing" airplanes that the agency is researching. Through that long-term project, NASA hopes to create a new generation of airplanes with wings that bend and twist so they can fly fast or slow, or even hover.

Granda is the 43rd recipient of the Outstanding Scholarly Achievement Award, which is given annually to a CSUS faculty member who has made significant contributions to a discipline through scholarly activity, creative artistic endeavors, research and publication.

Granda is at 278-5711 and his website is <http://gaia.ecs.csus.edu/~grandajj>.
