

Inauguration highlights Homecoming Week

Sacramento State is set to launch an exciting week of homecoming activities Oct. 4 through 9 starting with the inauguration of Alexander Gonzalez as its 11th president and closing with a campuswide open house and football game.

Seating will start at noon for the 12:30 p.m. inauguration ceremony Monday, Oct. 4 in the University's Outdoor Theatre. Steeped in tradition that dates to medieval times, the event will include a procession in academic regalia, formal investiture ceremony and speeches. A reception with light refreshments will follow. The event is free and open to the public.

The celebration continues with a concert that evening by the University's Symphonic Wind Ensemble along with the Maria Carrillo High School band at 7:30 p.m. in the Music Recital Hall in Capistrano Hall.

The activities following the inauguration will build on the success of last year's expanded Homecoming Week and continue through Saturday, Oct. 9, when the Hornets take on Portland State at 6:05 p.m. at Hornet Stadium.

Tuesday, Oct. 5 opens with a talk by West Sacramento Mayor Christopher Cabaldon at 7:30 a.m. in the Alumni Center. Cabaldon is first of the Breakfast Club speakers presented in an ongoing series by the University's Alumni Association. Other events Tuesday include the Student Homecoming Parade from the residence halls to the Library Quad starting at 11:45 a.m. and a recital by Sacramento State Opera Alumni members Michele and Jason Detwiler at 8 p.m. in the Music Recital Hall in Capistrano Hall.

Wednesday's events include the Golden Grads Luncheon at 11:30 a.m. in the Alumni Center honoring alums from 1949 through 1955 and a performance by the Sacramento State Saxophone ensembles at 8 p.m. in Capistrano Hall 151.

On Thursday as many students, alumni, faculty and staff as possible will "swarm" for a photo in the shadow of the giant inflatable Herky the Hornet mascot at 11:55 a.m. in the Library Quad. Also Thursday, Hornet volleyball will take on Portland State at 7 p.m. in Hornet Gym and the semi-final rounds of the San Francisco International Standup Comedy Competition will kick off at 7:30 p.m. in the University Union Ballroom.

An event-packed Friday includes the Alumni Honors Luncheon at noon in the Alumni Center, a parent's reception with President Alexander and Gloria Gonzalez at 4 p.m. in the residence halls, men's and women's soccer games and an evening Homecoming football game rally with live music, fireworks and more starting at 7 p.m. in Serna Plaza.

Saturday a campuswide open house will feature lectures, demonstrations and displays from University colleges and departments. Other events include a Homecoming concert showcasing alternative music bands at noon in Serna Plaza and a volleyball match against Eastern Washington at 1 p.m. in the Hornet Gym. The activities lead into pre-game partying at the Alumni Center and outside Hornet Stadium until kickoff of the game against Portland State at 6:05 p.m.

Performance and game tickets are available from the CSUS Ticket Office at (916) 278-4323 or Tickets.com. For more information, call (916) 278-6295.

Director, actress to screen film

Critically acclaimed director Sergio Arau and his wife, actress Yareli Arizmendi, who starred in Like Water for Chocolate, will show their film A Day Without a Mexican at 7:30 p.m., on Wednesday, Oct. 6 in the University Union Ballroom as part of Hispanic Heritage Month at Sacramento State.

The event will include a lecture by Arau and Arizmendi about the making of the film, which had the second-best per screen average gross its opening weekend, an impressive feat for first-time director Arau. Arau is the son of Alfonso Arau who directed Like Water for Chocolate.

The film stars Arizmendi as Lila Rodríguez, the only remaining Latino in California after 14 million Latinos vanish into thin air. The film poses the question: What would happen to California politically, economically and socially if there were suddenly no Latinos? Described by CBS Evening News as a "satirical mockumentary," the filmmakers say A Day Without a Mexican was made as an attempt to shed light on a population often taken for granted in California, or to, as Arizmendi puts it, "make the invisible visible." Controversial, humorous and thought-provoking, the film will be an important feature of the Hispanic Heritage Month festivities at Sacramento State.

Tickets are $10 general and $5 for Sacramento State students and are available at the CSUS Ticket Office at (916) 278-4323 or through Tickets.com.

University Affairs reorganized with two appointments

Setting the groundwork for a reorganization of the Office of University Affairs, President Alexander Gonzalez has made two major appointments, both reporting directly to him.

Carole Hayashino of San Francisco State University will serve as vice president for advancement and Phil Garcia, formerly of the Sacramento Bee and the Office of the Lt. Governor, will be special assistant to the President for governmental relations.

Carole Hayashino

Garcia's appointment was immediate and Hayashino's will take effect on Oct. 25.

"These appointments will allow us to move forward quickly in areas of great importance to the University. I am delighted to have persuaded individuals of such high quality and experience to join our team. I look forward to working with them," said Gonzalez in making the appointments.

Hayashino, currently associate vice president for university advancement and development, has been at SFSU since 1997. She has served as a lecturer in the department of Asian American studies. Strongly committed to diversity, she has in the past served with the national office of the Japanese

Phil Garcia

American Citizens League. She received her bachelor's degree from SFSU and her master's degree from the University of San Francisco. Over the years at SFSU she has held increasingly responsible positions including director of foundation and corporate relations and director of development. She has been closely involved in developing the fundraising infrastructure and encouraging a culture of giving,

Alumni to be honored at Homecoming

Homecoming Week includes two special events honoring Sacramento State graduates. This year's Golden Grads Luncheon honors alumni from the classes of 1949 through 1955 and will be followed by a tour of the University Union and the Library Archives. It will be held at 11:30 a.m., Wednesday, Oct. 6 in the Alumni Center. The cost is $20 and reservations are required.

The annual Alumni Honors Luncheon, recognizing distinguished alumni, will be at noon, Friday, Oct. 8 at the Alumni Center. Cost is $25 and reservations are required. A reception in honor of the recipients will be held from 11 to 11:45 a.m.

To reserve a space at either event, contact the Alumni Association at 278-6295.

professional activities

The CSUS Bulletin welcomes submissions to the Professional Activities Section from faculty, administration and staff. Items are run on a space available basis. They should be no longer than 75 words and may be submitted to bulletin@csus.edu or faxed to 278-5290.

grants

ROY DIXON, chemistry, and William DeGraffenreid, physics and astronomy, have been awarded a three-year, $206,000 grant from the National Science Foundation titled "Development and Applications of Aerosol Charge and Aerosol Photoionization Detectors for High Performance Liquid Chromatography."

scholarship

DENNIS TOOTELIAN, management, was profiled in McDonald's Corporation's "McDonald's Worldwide Corporate Responsibility Report 2004" for his work measuring the economic impact of McDonald's restaurants on local communities. The report is disseminated worldwide to more than 40,000 people and is posted on McDonald's website. Tootelian was interviewed by the Sacramento Bee on Aug. 12 about the possible impacts on entrepreneurs and banks of new Small Business Administration lending policies.

EILEEN HEASER, library, has produced the 4th edition of "Nursing & Allied Health Index to Measurement & Assessment Tools/Instruments & Questionnaires" online at <http://library.csus.edu/guides/rogenmoserd/heas/nursing2004.pdf> and in print reference in the library. The index is targeted for the specialty areas of nursing, physical therapy, and speech pathology and audiology.

TIMOTHY A. CAPRON, criminal justice, was a visiting scholar at Thammasat University in Bangkok, Thailand over the summer. He taught a graduate course on security management and provided security consulting to the Thai government, including examining the security for the new metro system.

HAROLDENE WUNDER, accountancy, had her article "The Effect of International Tax Policy on Foreign Direct Investment" published in Tax Notes International.

MARIO ESTIOKO and JOHN FORREST, graphic design, presented a paper on "Ten Ideas for More Effective Critiquing" at the VISCOM Conference in Monterey in June. Estioko presented a paper titled "A Design Model for Visual Communication" at the Second International Conference on New Directions in the Humanities in Prato, Italy in July.

BRUCE BAYLEY, family and consumer sciences, contributed to a handbook for the National Council on Family Relations titled "Family science: Professional development and career opportunities." The publication is distributed nationally and will serve as a primary vehicle for educating those interested in pursuing careers related to family science.

BILL OWEN, communication studies, has won first place (out of more than 1,100 entries) in the 2004 international Harold Henderson Haiku Contest sponsored by the Haiku Society of America.

DANIEL CLARK OREY, teacher education, participated in the UNESCOI-sponsored meeting of the International Association of Universities in São Paulo. While in Brazil, he gave a number of talks and workshops: "Matemática e Modelagem" at the Encontro Nacional de Educadores de Matemática at the Universidade Federal de Pernambuco in Recife; "Pesquisa na Educação – Pontos e Contrapontos entre o Brasil e os Estados Unidos" for the Masters in Education group; a speech "Etnomatemática – Ontem e Hoje" for the Mathematics education faculty and students; and "Modelagem Matemática – Ensino e Pesquisa" at the Universidade de Blumenau. He consulted with mathematics education students and faculty at the Universidade Federal de Ouro Preto in Minas Gerais in July and August.

RUTH BALLARD, biological sciences, prepared the paternity report that helped convict Deondre Terrell Hudson of first-degree murder. His girlfriend, Quinisha Thomas, aged 18, was shot to death in Sacramento and the DNA tests showed that she was 8-months pregnant with Hudson's child.

NANCY SHULOCK, public policy and administration testified before the California Performance Review Commission in Los Angeles on Sept. 9 on issues pertaining to higher education. She also wrote one of the six featured pieces on accountability in higher education that was published in the Chronicle for Higher Education's Sept 3 Review Forum called "How Can Colleges Prove that they Measure Up?"

MARK BROWN, government, was awarded the Virginia Walsh Award for best dissertation from the American Political Science Association's section on Science, Technology and Environmental Politics during the Association's annual meeting in Chicago, Sept. 2-5. His dissertation, completed at Rutgers University in 2001, explores the relationship between science and citizenship in modern democratic theory and politics.

CHRISTINA M. BELLON, philosophy, was a speaker to Stanford University's Summer Institute of Philosophy on July 6. The talk was titled "Avoiding Hemlock: Active Citizenship in a Post-Modern, Global Era." She also participated on a panel on pornography for the Center for Applied and Professional Ethics at CSU Chico on May 6. Her presentation was titled "Pornography as Harm."

BRYAN COLEMAN-SALGADO, physical therapy, has been appointed to the Public Health Advisory Board by the Sacramento County Board of Supervisors. The board advises the Board of Supervisors on issues of public health, identifies local health needs and priorities, encourages the development of appropriate services and acts as a forum for public health and primary care advocacy.

RICHARD SAVINO, music, has co-edited Francesca Caccini's Il primo libro delle musiche of 1618. The edition includes 17 secular monodies for one and two voices with figured bass accompaniment.

CELESTE ROSEBERRY-MCKIBBIN, speech pathology and audiology, published an article titled "Strategies for working with children from low-income backgrounds" in ADVANCE for Speech-Language Pathologists and Audiologists. She published a video and workbook titled Assessment of Bilingual Learners: Language Difference or Disorder?

in the news

DENNIS TOOTELIAN, management, was interviewed by the Sacramento Bee for an article appearing on Sept. 12 concerning how ethnic groups select particular types of small business ownership.

TIM HODSON, Center for California Studies, was quoted in the Sacramento Bee on Feb. 2 about U.S. Senate hopeful Howard Kallogian, on Feb. 10 on Congressional candidate Rico Oller and Feb. 24 on the Economic Recovery Bond Act. He was quoted in a Feb. 2 San Francisco Daily Journal article about the Assembly's judiciary committee. He was also quoted in a Jan. 6 San Ramon Valley Times article on Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger's state-of-the-state address and a Jan. 9 Christian Science Monitor article on the governor's proposed budget.

JOANNE MARROW, psychology, was quoted in a Jan. 19 Time magazine article on the power of love.

Prof tackles toxin in Delta drinking water

Chemistry professor Susan Crawford

Talk about efficient. At the same time Sacramento State chemistry professor Susan Crawford is tracking the cause of a toxin lurking in drinking water from the Sacramento Delta, a second experiment she's conducting with absorbent materials called zeolites may turn out to be a possible solution.

More than 22 million people depend on Delta water, but before it can be used it goes through the chlorination process. Unfortunately, Crawford says, the good work of chlorination sometimes results in another problem: "When you chlorinate Delta water, dissolved organic or DOC—carbons associated with peat and other remnants of the land around the Delta—form trihalomethanes or THMs, such as chloroform, which is considered a carcinogen."

Working with the U.S. Geological Survey, Crawford uses a variety of sophisticated equipment including nuclear magnetic resonance and infrared spectroscopy to test water samples. She looks at the samples before and after chlorination to see what happens when the THMs form, looking for a link. "We're trying to determine if there's something similar between the DOC and the amount of THMs formed," she says. "Can it be traced to a site, such as near a peat island? Does it happen at a certain time of year, such as during tilling, during flooding or when irrigation takes place?"

"There's a tendency to blame agriculture. But it may be something that occurs in the Delta naturally such as plant decomposition," Crawford says, noting that before taking a radical, disruptive step such as modifying farming practices in the region, scientists need to be relatively sure of the culprit.

If the source turns out to be a naturally occurring process,

Crawford thinks she has a possible solution: Zeolites.

Crawford has been studying the filtering qualities of zeolites for years, including the ability of some zeolites to transform harmful materials into less dangerous ones. The porous rock materials are extremely absorbent, grabbing and holding waste products sort of like a molecular sponge.

If it turns out that the carbon in the Delta can't be controlled at the source, Crawford thinks zeolites might be an effective way to absorb the chloroform from the water.

In yet another project with Sacramento State's Office of Water Programs, Crawford is also looking at whether zeolites might be able to play a role in removing metals from storm water that runs off area roads.

■ FEE WAIVERS

Sacramento State employees wishing to participate in the fee waiver and reduction program for the Spring 2005 semester can pick up forms starting Oct. 1 from the University Training and Development office in Sacramento Hall 173. The deadline for returning completed forms is Oct. 29.

Individual eligibility for the program will be determined before the forms will be handed out.

Continuing fee waiver program participants will receive forms via campus mail.

Details: 278-6327 or www.csus.edu/fas/traindev/train.htm.

■ GRANT WORKSHOP

The University's Center for Health and Human Services Research is hosting a free workshop for students and faculty seeking funds for biomedical and behavioral research from 9 a.m.

to 5 p.m., Sept. 23 and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., Sept. 24 in the University Union Ballroom.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services along with the National Institutes of Health are co-hosting the event designed to assist participants in developing an NIH proposal.

Details: 278-7255

■ ANTHROPOLOGY EXHIBIT

"Trobriand Worlds: Contesting Representations in an Age of Reflexivity" is a new exhibit in the Anthropology Museum in Mendocino Hall 1000 that will run through Dec. 1.

The exhibit features artifacts and photographs representing contemporary Trobriand islanders, and offers unique insight into more than a century of anthropological fieldwork among these Melanesian peoples. Curators are Sacramento State professors Jay Crain and Allan Darrah.

The museum is open 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., Tuesday through Friday.

Details: 278-6067 or www.csus.edu/anth/museum

■ BULLETIN SUBMISSIONS

News briefs, events or professional activity items for the CSUS Bulletin may be sent to bulletin@csus.edu, or, if necessary, faxed to 278-5290. You can also use the electronic submission form, available at www.csus.edu/news/sendnews.html. Ideas for feature stories are also welcome.

The Bulletin is published Mondays during the academic year, and is available online at www.csus.edu/bulletin. The deadline for submissions is 10 a.m. the Wednesday before publication. Items are published on a space available basis and are usually edited.

while steadily increasing private giving from alumni, staff, emeriti faculty, foundations and friends of the University. She also is engaged with the community as a member of the KQED Board of Directors and the College of Marin Board of Trustees.

SFSU President Robert Corrigan said, "Carole Hayashino's strong leadership and team-building skills have brought our Advancement effort to new heights of success. Her strong community orientation and deep understanding of the California State University's mission have made her even more valuable to San Francisco State. We will miss her, but I applaud the wisdom of Sacramento's State's choice."

Garcia is a former journalist who also draws on past experience with the state Legislature and Congress. For 10 years he worked at the Sacramento Bee prior to working for the Office of California Lt. Governor Cruz Bustamante, the State Board of Education and for the past several months as a consultant to EdFund and the California Student Aid Commission. In these positions he was responsible for policymaking and strategic communication functions.

Between 1986 and 1988, he was in Washington D.C. as a reporter for the wire service UPI and the Space Business News. He also was a Congressional fellow with the American Political Science Association. Previously, in 1981, he was a journalism fellow with the Inter American Press Association in Mexico City.

In Sacramento, he worked with the Sacramento Bee, rising from a business staff writer to state editor and then to deputy capitol bureau chief, where he helped manage the bureau's team of reporters who cover the California Legislature and state politics.

A graduate the University of Kansas, he is currently a board member for the Capital Unity Council and a founding member of the National Association of Hispanic Journalists.

30-YEAR PROFILE

Raymond Grant

Raymond Grant is pleasantly surprised he has spent 30 years at Sacramento State. "I never thought I'd be here this long," the admission counselor says. "But I've really enjoyed myself. It has been excellent."

Grant started as a Sacramento State student soon after leaving the Army where he had served as a medical laboratory specialist. His original career goal was to work in a hospital. "But working here just happened upon me," Grant says. His first on-campus job was as a student assistant in admissions and records. He then moved on to clerical assistant, supervisor, evaluator, and finally took his current position of admission counselor.

Grant says he has watched the campus grow a lot in 30 years, but he especially loves the greenery. "The campus is a beautiful place. I bring my lunch a lot and sit under a tree."

In the past three decades, he has gathered fond recollections of his co-workers. "I've seen a lot of people come and go, but many have been here long enough to say they have great memories of the day my wife phoned to say she was in labor. I was so excited."

The longtime Sacramento resident has two children. One attends the University as an engineering major. Grant says he tells his son exactly what he tells others who come to see him in admissions and records. "They're required to earn a C average, and if they want better grades, they need to put in time to get what they want."

He recommends classes and offers advice. "I say 'This is what you have to do' but then how they do it is up to them. I try to be as helpful as I can. I've seen a lot of students and I'm glad when things work out for them."

The 55-year-old says he doesn't know when he will retire. "I'll work maybe five, six, or seven years more. I'll see how my health is and what money is like." He has post-retirement plans, however. Grant, a fan of Northern California sports teams says, "I can see myself part time with the River Cats or the Kings."

However, he'll miss the University when he leaves. "This is a job I've enjoyed. I like to help students. I especially love to see them smiling when they leave admissions and records."

MAYORAL BREAKFAST

West Sacramento mayor Christopher Cabaldon will be the first speaker in this year's Breakfast Club Speakers Series, hosted by the Alumni Association. Cabaldon will speak at 7:30 a.m., Tuesday, Oct. 5 in the Alumni Center as part of Homecoming Week activities.

The events, which include breakfast, feature a range of guests speaking on hot topics in the Sacramento region in a low-key, off-the-record format that allows audience interaction.

Cabaldon is now serving his fourth term as mayor of West Sacramento and is credited with helping to bring baseball to the city and with efforts to revitalize the waterfront. He is president of EdVoice, a statewide nonprofit network of citizens and educational philanthropists fighting for public schools. He serves on the boards of the California Center for Regional Leadership, the Yolo-Solano Air Quality Management District, and the Central Valley Regional Water Quality Control Board. In 2002, Cabaldon was appointed by the U.S. Secretary of the Interior to the Bay-Delta Committee which oversees implementation of the CALFED water program.

Other speakers in this year's Breakfast Club series include California State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jack O'Connell on Dec. 7, Sacramento Bee publisher and president Janis Heaphy on March 8, and River City Bank president-CEO Jeanne Reaves on May 3. Cabaldon's talk is sponsored by the government chapter of the Alumni Association.
