Recycle, reduce or reuse paper

The integrated waste manager has set a goal of zero waste for the campus. The campus community can help reach that goal by recycling, reducing use or reusing paper.

Reduce paper usage by using both sides of the paper, and store scratch paper in a tray to put through the printer a second time for drafts. Another option is creating an electronic-only version. For example, The Bulletin went to an email-only version in 2005.

Paper items can be recycled by placing them in any blue desk-side or copier-side recycle container. Remove plastic combs and take paper out of binders. Bags of shredded paper can go directly into any blue paper recycling bin, please keep it in the plastic bag. There are also "paper and cardboard" bins behind each residence hall.

For large amounts of paper recycling (such as in office cleanouts), 90-gallon totes are available for loan. Submit a service request online at www.fm.csus.edu/Service_Request.htm. If the office has a pallet's worth (more than 20 boxes) of paper to recycle, call 278-5801 for a special pick up.

For more information, visit the "Sacramento State Recycles" website at www.fm.csus.edu/iwm.

Football adds nine more to 2009 recruiting class

The Sacramento State football team signed nine student-athletes to National Letters of Intent, it was announced by Hornet head coach Marshall Sperbeck.

Sac State to reach out to future students at local churches

Sacramento State will promote the value of higher education at area churches during the fourth annual Super Sunday, Feb. 15.

University President Alexander Gonzalez says, "Our campus has built a strong tradition of reaching out to diverse communities, and Super Sunday is a wonderful opportunity to spread the message that a college education is within reach."

Gonzalez, University provost and vice president Joseph Sheley, and vice president for Student Affairs Lori Varlotta will visit historically African-American churches in the Sacramento region, including:

- St. Paul Missionary Baptist Church
3996 14th Ave.
Sacramento
- Oak Park United Methodist Church
3600 Broadway
Sacramento

Times for the Feb. 15 visits will be determined.

Super Sunday is an initiative by the California State University system to bring the college message to thousands of prospective students and their families. Statewide, campus presidents, CSU trustees, CSU Chancellor Charles B. Reed and other officials will visit 68 churches, including 41 in Northern California throughout the month.

"At Super Sunday, thousands of students and their families learn that planning for college starts in the sixth grade" Reed says. "We hope to make communities aware of the steps that students need to complete each year to get to college. We are pleased to say that these efforts are paying off. Since Super Sunday began, the CSU has seen steady increases in African American undergraduate enrollment."

The CSU's 4-year old partnership with the churches has helped to increase college applications from African American students by 15 percent and enrollments by 8.5 percent.

For more information, contact Sacramento State's Public Affairs office at 278-6156.

University receives federal honor for community engagement

Sacramento State has been named to the 2008 President's Higher Education Community Service Honor Roll by the Corporation for National and Community Service. The award was announced Monday, Feb. 9 at the 91st annual meeting of the American Council on Education, in Washington, D.C.

The Honor Roll, which began in 2006, recognizes colleges and universities nationwide that support innovative and effective community service and service-learning programs. It is the highest federal recognition a college or university can receive for its commitment to volunteering, service-learning, and civic engagement, and is only given to a few institutions each year.

"This is a tremendous honor because the University prides itself on being an integral part of the community and providing programs that embrace the diversity of its students," says Sheila Macias, administrative director of Sacramento State's Community Engagement Center. "The Honor Roll recognizes the great work going on around campus in the variety of disciplines."

"We have worked hard to strengthen our campus's connection to the Sacramento area," says Sacramento State President Alexander Gonzalez.

"The majority of our students come from this region, and after they graduate, they use the education and practical experiences they gained here to become the leaders who guide the future of their communities," Gonzalez says.

Sacramento State's application for the award highlighted the University's involvement in a number of on- and off-campus community engagement programs including the Ethnic Studies Department, the 65th Street Corridor project, Engineers Without Borders, Project P.L.A.Y. (Play-orientated Lifetime Activities for Youth), Student Activities, the Bilingual/Multicultural Education Department, the College Assistance Migrant Program (CAMP) and the Community Engagement Center.

The Honor Roll is sponsored by the President's Council on Service and Civic Participation and the U.S. Departments of Education and Housing and Urban Development.

For more information on the honor roll, contact Macias at 278-4610.

Stem cell research topic of next STEM lecture

Jan Nolta, a Sacramento State alum and director of the UC Davis Stem Cell Program, will be the guest speaker at the next Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) lecture at 7 p.m., Feb. 24, in the University Union's Redwood Room.

Nolta, who received her biology degree from Sacramento State in 1984, has been the director of Davis' stem cell program since 2006. Her lecture will focus on research describing how stem cells can be used to repair tissue and to cure diseases.

"Human stem cells from adult sources have been shown in our laboratory and others to promote the repair of damaged tissues," Nolta said. "Different populations of stem cells have been shown to contribute to the regeneration of muscle, neural tissue, the liver, the heart and the vasculature."

While the potential benefits of stem cells could signal a radical change in medical treatment, Nolta says more research is needed to understand the precise mechanisms by which stem cells work. "The field is an extremely exciting one, and many questions remain to be answered before stem cell therapy for tissue repair can be used most effectively in the clinic."

UC Davis is constructing a 100,000 square-foot stem cell research facility in Sacramento, the UC Davis Institute for Regenerative Cures, supported by the California Institute for Regenerative Medicine.

Nolta said programs are being developed that will soon bring Sacramento State students to the new facility for training and internships mentored by Sacramento State and UC Davis faculty members.

For more information about the lecture, contact the UC Davis Stem Cell Program at (916) 703-9300 or the Sacramento State Center for STEM Excellence at 916-278-2789.

Alumni scholarship lends a helping hand to future graduates

Sacramento State graduates are helping the next generation of Sacramento State students by contributing to the Sacramento State Alumni Association's scholarship program.

"These scholarships were created out of the desire to assist superior students to attend our University," says Jennifer Barber, executive director of Alumni Relations. "The hope is that the recipient will contribute to the success of the University and will graduate to be a productive member of society and an active Alumni Association member."

Initially funded by donations from life members of the Sacramento State Alumni Association, the scholarships are now broadly supported with the goal of helping students pursue higher education at Sacramento State.

Scholarships are awarded in three categories: Freshman, Continuing Undergraduate and Graduate, and range in value from $1,000 to $2,000.

Applicants must have a cumulative grade point average of 3.4 or better and be enrolled or accepted to attend Sacramento State. Applications are reviewed by a selection committee of alumni and are rated on the several factors including the candidate's ability to achieve academic success, demonstrated leadership and service to school and community.

Applications for the scholarship are now being accepted and must be received by the Alumni Association or postmarked by Monday, March 2. Scholarship winners will be notified before May 1.

Instructions and the application can be found online at <http://www.sacstatealumni.com/>. For more information about the Sacramento State Alumni Association Scholarship Program or how to support the program call the Alumni Association at 278-6295 or email alumni@csus.edu.

News page has new look

Sacramento State's news web page has been updated with a new look and new features.

The page has larger photos and a design that makes it easier to navigate around the screen. One click on the summary of each news item takes the viewer to the full story. New stories are included regularly.

The page also makes it easier to access a variety of multi-media products including public affairs-produced videos, KVIE Focus video spots and slideshows.

A column along the right side includes buttons connecting visitors with topical information, such as budget and enrollment updates.

The left column provides links to pages of interest to faculty, staff, students and the public, including members of the media looking for information and contacts about current events.

It's even easier to find the news page now. Just look for the larger "More News" button on Sacramento State's main web page under "University News."

Dialogue on Violence Against Women

Sacramento State will present its fifth annual Dialogue on Violence Against Women from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Friday, Feb. 13, in the University Union.

The conference is titled, "Human Trafficking: Internationally and In Our Own Backyard." There are an estimated 27 million people who are enslaved today nationally and internationally.

The conference will feature the Survivors' Quilt Project, whose mission is to raise awareness about modern-day slavery and to honor the survival of slaves globally. Aashika Damodar, founder of the project, will discuss some of the stories behind it.

Soheir Stolba will present, "Trafficking in Women: A Case Study from Nigeria." Stolba is an anthropology professor at American River College and co-founder of the SHARE Institute, a non-profit organization that specializes in assisting women and children globally and domestically.

The conference also includes a showing of the award-winning documentary "Sacrifice," which examines the social, cultural, and economic forces at work in the trafficking of Burmese girls into prostitution in Thailand. The filmmaker, Ellen Bruno, will discuss the film and her experiences.

Also featured will be Kay Buck, executive director of the Coalition to Abolish Slavery and Trafficking in Los Angeles.

This conference is co-sponsored by the Sacramento State Women's Resource Center, Sacramento State Student Health Services, the SHARE Institute, My Sister's House, Soroptimists of Sacramento, and the Visiting Scholars Program of the Sacramento State Center for Teaching and Learning.

The conference is open to the public. Tickets are $45 general admission, $25 for students and seniors. To register for the conference, visit www.my-sisters-house.org. For more information on the conference, call the Women's Resource Center at 278-7388 or visit at www.csus.edu/wrc.

Sacramento State teams prepare for spring season

Sacramento State Athletics had a very good year in 2008 with several programs making it into the post season. With a number of returning student-athletes, 2009 looks to be just as promising.

Softball

Sacramento State enters the new season on the heels of a breakthrough 2008 campaign that saw the team finish with a 32-21 overall record, a 14-6 mark in the Pacific Coast Softball Conference, the program's first-ever PCSC championship and an appearance in the NCAA Regionals. Head coach Kathy Strahan, who was named the PCSC Coach of the Year last season, welcomes back 10 players from last season's squad, including five positional starters and three pitchers.

Baseball

The Hornets will hit the field in 2009 hoping to improve on a 2008 season that saw the team post its first ever Western Athletic Conference Tournament victory. Head coach John Smith returns for his 31st season at Sacramento State looking to record his 850th career win. First team all-WAC performer Tim Wheeler returns for his junior season after hitting .330 with three home runs and 43 RBI's in 2008. The Hornets also return three starting pitchers from a season ago. Junior right hander Trevor York (4-6, 4.97 ERA, 87.0 innings) will miss the beginning of the season recovering from offseason surgery, but senior lefthanders Brian Smith (4-1, 4.75 ERA, 53.0 innings) and Jose Ramirez (4-6, 5.27, 70.0 innings) return to the rotation.

Women's track and field

A year after claiming its first Big Sky outdoor track and field championship, Sacramento State enters the 2009 season as the favorite to repeat. The Hornets roster features 10 student-athletes who earned all-Big Sky Conference honors last season, including five Big Sky champions. The group is highlighted by senior Morinsola Keshinro, the defending conference champion in the 400-hurdles and the reigning 100-hurdles champion Alicia Truesdale. Sacramento State will host three regular season meets before attempting to defend its conference title in Missoula, Mont., in May.

Men's track and field

Last season, the Sacramento State men nearly claimed their first outdoor Big Sky title in school history, finishing just six points behind Northern Arizona, 166-160. This year, the Hornets are hoping to use that finish as motivation to move themselves atop the awards stand. Sacramento State will have numerous weapons at its disposal, including defending conference champions Ronald Brookins (100-hurdles and long jump) and Emilio Hernandez (high jump). Hernandez shined last spring at the Big Sky Championships and was named the Male Outdoor Field Athlete of the Meet after winning the long jump and finishing third in the triple jump. Senior A.J. Reed will team with Brookins to create one of the top hurdle combinations in the west. Reed finished first at the indoor championships and was second behind Brookins at the outdoor meet. Next week's "Bulletin" will preview men's and women's tennis, men's and women's golf, and rowing.

Open Forums for Information Technology Strategic Planning

The Information Technology Steering Committee cordially invites the campus to the following two open forums for review and discussion of the draft campus-wide Information Technology Strategic Plan:

- Wednesday, February 11, 11:30am to 12:30pm, Library 11 (enter from AIRC side basement level)
- Tuesday, February 17, 4:00 pm to 5:00 pm, Library 11 (enter from AIRC side basement level)

Each forum will include a brief overview of the IT Strategic Plan and its relationship to the university-wide Strategic Plan, followed by comments and questions from the attendees. Members of the IT Steering Committee will be present to listen and respond.

The Plan, along with associated materials used in the work of the Steering Committee, can be found at www.csus.edu/irt/strategicplanning. The plan addresses information technology needs on a campus-wide basis, meaning that there is something pertinent to almost everyone in the content of the plan. Review of the IT Strategic Plan is also highly pertinent to both implementation of our campus Strategic Plan and discussions surrounding our new Futures Initiative. We hope to receive feedback from all sectors of the campus, to ensure the plan truly represents broad institutional needs.

If you are unable to make one of the forums, but would still like to comment, you may do so by navigating to the IT strategic planning website noted above and clicking on Comments and Suggestions, or by writing to IRTfeedback@csus.edu.

Hitasha Mitera

Hometown: Toronto, Canada

Major: Master's degree in Speech Language Pathology. Class of 2007

Background: Mitera completed her bachelor of health sciences degree at the University of Western Ontario in Canada, where she did extensive volunteer work at various hospitals and at the world-renowned Aphasia Institute in Toronto. The experiences and understanding that she gained during her volunteer work led her to choose speech language pathology as her career. "I chose to do my master's degree at California State University, Sacramento because it has one of the best speech language pathology programs in the state of California."

Influences: "My family, friends and professors have all had a significant impact at various points along the way in my academic journey. Their love, support and guidance have meant more to me than words can describe."

Highlight: "The clinical experience I had in working with a variety of patients at the Maryjane Rees Language, Speech and Hearing Center here at Sac State was definitely one of the highlights of my post-graduate studies. Getting that smile from the child, a thank you note from a parent, or a nod of approval from an elderly patient who could only communicate via body language made it all worthwhile."

Proudest Accomplishment: "When the dean asked me to stand up during the commencement ceremonies in front of all the graduating students and parents while she recognized my accomplishments in relation to my academic, clinical and leadership skills."

Destination: Accepted a full-time position as a speech language pathologist at a hospital in Los Angeles. She plans to continue exploring research in the field and pursue a doctoral program in the near future. "My goal is to not only make every effort to increase awareness about the field of speech language pathology, but also to make a difference in people's lives, by helping as many people as I can overcome their communication deficits."
