PIXEL PARTNERSHIP—The University is embarking on an innovative partnership with Folsom Lake College to produce more highly qualified computer science and information technology professionals.

Life after graduation

Two recent Sacramento State graduates—Hitasha Mitera and Lia Robertson—reflect on their experiences at the University and how it affected them both personally and professionally. Mitera and Robertson graduated at the end of the fall 2007 semester.

Student-run radio station rides the airwaves

Student-run radio station, KSSU 1580 AM, got its start in 1989. And from the looks of its headquarters, a small room with dated couches, an ancient SEGA video game and open discussion between KSSU disc jockeys and staff about neon-colored spiral shoe laces and Moon Shoes, not much has changed since then. That couldn't be farther from the truth.

Recycling bottles and cans

In 2006, Sacramento State diverted 61.6% of its waste—3,700 tons of material—from the landfill. The State of California's goal for institutions such as the University is 50%.

The integrated waste manager has set a goal of zero waste for

Divine Exhibition

"Hellenism & Orthodoxy: Sacred Images," continues its run through March 2 in the Library's Annex Gallery. The free exhibition of Orthodox religious icons is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesdays through Saturdays. Call Professor Katerina Lagos at 278-7103 for more the campus. The campus community can help reach that goal by recycling bottles and cans. There are approximately 50 bins for outdoor bottle and can recycling—one outside of each building.

Recycle containers for bottles and cans are now conveniently located inside the entrance of the AIRC building and in each of the student lounges on the first three floors. This is a pilot project and other buildings will follow if indoor recycling is successful at AIRC.

For more information, visit the "Sacramento State Recycles" website at www.fm.csus.edu/iwm.
