Evening career services offer tips on landing that dream job

It could be a life transition, the search for a meaningful career or just the need for a change, but on average, American workers are switching jobs every three years.

The reasons people decide to begin a new job search are varied, according to Nancy Carlton, associate professor in the Department of Counselor Education, but she says one common thread remains: "The nature of today's labor market is constant change, and people find themselves needing to learn how to manage on-going career and life choices."

Help is available for the general public through the Evening Community Career Services Program. According to Beth Merritt Miller, Director of the Career Center, the program is a unique collaboration between the Department of Counselor Education and the Division of Student Affairs' Career Center. The partnership allows Sacramento State's Career Center, Lassen Hall, room 2000, to remain open on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 6 to 8 p.m.

"Some clients are exploring their options; they are in the process of making a career decision," says Crystal Martinez, a Sacramento State graduate student who is working on a master's degree in career counseling.

"We also help polish the resume and conduct practice for interview sessions; for example, we take the client through some of the questions they will face when interviewed by a potential employer," Martinez adds.

"This is an excellent service for anyone who is thinking about the possibility of making a job or career change, but is not sure how to get started," according to David McVey, career counselor at Sacramento State.

The program provides assistance in a variety of areas including discovering meaningful work, decision-making and goal setting, career assessments, job search strategies, resume writing and interviewing techniques.

Participants in this program have access to the Career Center's wide range of resources, including a career resource library, computerized career information systems and information on Sacramento area employers, industries, and occupations.

Currently there are 10 master's level career counseling students providing this service. They are supervised by a Counselor Education faculty member. A one-time fee of $75 entitles the client to a semester of services.

For an appointment or more information, contact the Career Center at 278-6231.

For media assistance, contact the Sacramento State Public Affairs office at 278-6156.

Build a home—strengthen ties; students to take an alternative spring break

A number of Sacramento State students will forego suntan lotion and tropical breezes during the March break in order to wield hammers, move dirt and, literally, raise the roof as they participate in Alternative Break with Habitat for Humanity.

Alternative Break, a project sponsored by Sacramento State's Office of Community Collaboration, Student Activities and Alcohol Education Program, offers students an alternative option for academic breaks. The spring 2007 Alternative Break is hosted by Habitat for Humanity. Habitat for Humanity is a non-profit organization which organizes teams of volunteers to build simple, affordable housing for qualifying families.

Students have the option of volunteering one, two or three days, from March 28 – 31, to help build a local Habitat house. Most of Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday spaces have been filled, but more students are needed to volunteer on the busiest work day, Saturday, March 31.

The Habitat project will take place in Sacramento, at one of a number of current sites. Volunteers are asked to arrive on site at 8:15 a.m. each day and work until 4 p.m. Breakfast and lunch will be provided.

One more sign-up meeting is scheduled at 5 p.m., Wednesday, March 14 in the University Union, Walnut Room. This meeting is mandatory for those students not already signed up to participate in Alternative Break.

Alternative Break was conceived by Joseph Sheley, provost, Mike Lee, associate vice president of academic affairs, and Sheila Macias, administrative director of the Office of Community Collaboration, during a discussion on how OCC can further community engagement on campus. It has received strong interest throughout the campus and will expand community involvement opportunities in the Sacramento region. Organizers hope to build upon this success with Alternative Break programs throughout the year, offering local, national and international opportunities for service.

For more information, contact the Office of Community Collaboration 278-4610 or visit www.csus.edu/occ.

For media assistance, contact the Sacramento State Public Affairs office 278-6156.

The patient is in--Human Simulator welcomes the public at nursing program's open house

Sacramento State's Division of Nursing is holding its first Annual Open House from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., March 22 at El Dorado Hall. The public is invited to tour the nursing building, meet with nursing faculty and students and attend demonstrations in the nursing skills laboratory.

Among the day's activities will be demonstrations of the Human Patient Simulator. At the forefront of advanced instructional technology, the simulator can produce breath sounds and heart tones and allow students to practice taking blood pressures and pulses. Specialized simulators replicate adult and infant emergencies, enabling students to better handle real, life-threatening clinical situations.

Sacramento State recognizes that there is a growing shortage of nurses in our community. In order to address this shortage, the nursing program has doubled in size over the last 5 years. With expansion of the program, the University has identified 1,000 pre-nursing students on campus, as well as hundreds of community college students, who are actively completing prerequisite nursing courses in preparation for a nursing major.

This open house is designed to help prospective nursing students learn more about the bachelor's program at Sacramento State and experience some of the exciting new technological advances available in the nursing skills laboratory.

Pre-nursing advising sessions will be held at 10:15 a.m., 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 p.m.

For more information about the open house, contact Sacramento State's Division of Nursing at 278-6525. For information about the Division of Nursing at Sacramento State, visit www.hhs.csus.edu/NRS/.

For media assistance, contact the Sacramento State Public Affairs office at 278-6156.

The Cat in the Hat prances into the spotlight in Seussical™

The magical world of Dr. Seuss comes to life on stage, as Sacramento State's Department of Theatre and Dance presents Seussical™ the Musical, at the University Theatre, Shasta Hall, from March 9 – 25.

Performances are at 6:30 p.m., Wednesdays and Thursdays; 8 p.m., Fridays and Saturdays; and 2 p.m. matinees on Sundays.

Seussical™, which debuted on Broadway in 2000, is based on 14 of Dr. Seuss' memorable classics combined into one hilarious tale. When chaos erupts in the Jungle of Nool, the Cat in the Hat, Horton the Elephant, Gertrude McFuzz and a cast of remarkable characters are charged with bringing harmony back to the world. The production takes its audience on an unpredictable ride, from the miniature houses of Whoville to the wild greenery of the Jungle of Nool.

What distinguishes this production is the addition of an array of whimsical puppets, thanks to director Richard Bay, professor of theatre and puppetry at Sacramento State. "I knew that if we were going to do Seussical™, I wanted to include puppets," says Bay. He and his team have created an array of Muppet-style puppets, rod puppets and even some shadow puppets that float above the stage, helping to bring to life Seuss' inventive creations.

While Seussical™ has great appeal for children, there is plenty for an adult audience to enjoy. Dr. Seuss has maintained a wide and loyal following among readers of all ages. "Dr. Seuss is always interesting," says Bay. "In addition to being entertaining, there is often a socially conscious message to be found."

Bay is equally enthusiastic about his cast of 37 performers. "This is one of the strongest groups of students I have ever worked with," he says. "They are wonderful singers and dancers. It should be a special performance."

Tickets are $15 general admission; $12 seniors, students and SARTA members; $12 Sacramento State faculty and staff; and $10 children 10 and younger. For Wednesday and Thursday performances, general admission is only $10, $7 for seniors, students, children and SARTA members.

Tickets may be purchased by phone at 278-4323 or online at www.tickets.com.

For more information on show times for Seussical™ the Musical or for information on upcoming productions, log on to the Sacramento State Department of Theatre and Dance website at www.csus.edu/dram.

For media assistance, contact the Sacramento State Public Affairs office 278-6156.

Reaccreditation process includes open forums on campus

Faculty, staff and students are invited to take part in one of three one-hour open forums at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, March 13 as part of the University's reaccreditation review.

Sacramento State is accredited by the Western Association of Schools and Colleges (WASC) and is required to undergo a periodical review process to maintain its status of accreditation. WASC has instituted a three-stage, sequential institutional review process since 2001.

The University is currently in the second stage of the review process – Capacity and Preparatory Review. In this stage, a Preparatory Review team reviews the information presented in the Capacity and Preparatory Report; evaluates key institutional resources, structures and processes in the light of the WASC Standards; assesses the institution's preparedness to undertake the Educational Effectiveness Review (third stage); and assists the institution in refining its focus and planning for that review.

As part of the second stage review, the Preparatory Review team will visit the campus on March 12-14 to gather detailed information to assist their evaluation of the University's preparedness for Educational Effectiveness Review. The University has scheduled three open forums for the visit team members to meet with faculty, staff and students. Faculty, staff, and students are encouraged to attend and share their perspectives with the WASC visit team.

The locations of the March 13 forums are as follows:

Faculty: California Suite, University Union
Staff: Academic Information Resources Center (AIRC) 1007
Students: Orchard Suite I, University Union

For more information on the reaccreditation process contact Academic Affairs office at 278-5933. For a copy of the Capacity and Preparatory Report, go to www.oir.csus.edu/wasc.

In Memoriam

One of Andrew S. "Andy" Kingsbury proudest accomplishments while working at Sacramento State was to enter the campus in the Professional Grounds Management Society, Green Star Competition conducted nationwide. As a result, Sacramento State received an honor award in the School and University Grounds category.

Andy Kingsbury passed away on Saturday, Feb. 17. He was also instrumental in introducing computer-controlled irrigation to the campus in 1991, reducing the time and labor involved in irrigation by use of a dedicated computer.

At his request no services are being held. Remembrances in his name can be made to the Sutter Hospice Foundation, 7300 Folsom Blvd., Sacramento, CA 95826 or Happy Tails Pet Sanctuary, 721 56th Street, Sacramento, CA 95819.

Recognition

Sacramento State's Aquatic Center has once again received national attention with the Outstanding Project - Mid-Size Access award presented by the State Organization for Boating Access (SOBA). The $3.8 million dollar project on Lake Natoma received this honor Feb. 27 at the offices of State Department of Boating and Waterways. SOBA is just one of many recent national organizations who have recognized the Aquatic Center for its outstanding programs, regattas and championships, and its state-of-the-art facilities.

Campus Announcements

Commencement News

The University's spring commencement – which will be May 25 and 26 – will be held at Arco Arena this year rather than on campus. Holding the ceremonies indoors at Arco will prevent issues related to very hot weather at afternoon ceremonies or rain at any time. Two ceremonies last year experienced rain, one very seriously. This year, we also face heavy construction at the south end of the stadium. The move to Arco will also save money; the Arena provides all services for a set fee that campus would otherwise have to cover from its funds.

Private Support

The University is on its way to recording another strong year of private support. According to a mid-year report from the Office of University Development, Sacramento State has documented about $9.4 million in gift commitments as of January. More than $1.5 million has been given in support of new and continuing student scholarship funds. There are also more than $6 million in bequest intentions, which will eventually fund scholarships, program support and endowed faculty positions.

Highlights so far include:

- More than $1 million from the Osher Foundation to endow the Osher Reentry Scholarship Program.
- Endowment gifts of $50,000 from Max and Maurine Smart for the Robert Smart Memorial Lenaea Scholarship in Theatre, and $50,000 from William S. "Bill" Faught for the Barbara R. Faught Memorial Scholarship for Elementary Teachers.
- Support for the Guardian Scholars Program, which is for students who were previously in foster care. This includes $20,000 from the Foster Youth Education Fund and $12,500 from the Walter S. Johnson Foundation.
- $40,000 from GenCorp Foundation for the Roberts Family Development Center Tutoring Program in Mathematics, plus additional support of $25,000 for programs in Engineering and MESA Engineering Program (MEP). MEP also received more than $47,000 in support from Intel Corporation.

My Sac State – Change is Coming!

Sacramento State is introducing "My Sac State" (a replacement for CasperWeb). Beginning March 19, all Sacramento State students will be using My Sac State to view their Financial Aid information for fall 2007 and update their personal information. The self-service Faculty Center is scheduled for availability on April 2. Subsequently, continuing students will begin fall 2007 registration on April 23 through My Sac State.

Faculty will use CasperWeb to post spring and summer 07 grades. Student registration for summer 07 will also occur in CasperWeb. Additionally, CasperWeb will be used to advise continuing students for summer and fall 07 registrations.

CMS training will begin in March and April. For session details, visit the Training Calendar at www.csus.edu/cms/training/calendar/. Additional communications will be sent prior to specific training sessions.

All Faculty and Staff are encouraged to get a jump-start by taking the Information Security Program Training located in LearnerWeb at webauth.csus.edu/webauth.aspx?AuthAction=LearnerWeb. After completion of this 15 minute training, print and sign the certificate provided and forward it to the Office of Human Resources. This process will help avoid any delays in granting you access to the system.

Other key changes include:

- Fall 2007 registration for continuing students begins April 23.
- New students, freshmen and transfers will register at orientation in June.
- Fee collection will occur after registration, post-pay as compared to pre-pay.
- Enrollment cancellation for non-payment of fees will begin July 5.
- Auto-enrollment from the wait list will be run nightly and seats will be filled as they open up.
- Registration unit cap has been raised from 17 to 21 units for graduating seniors.
- Sac State Messaging, a new one-way communication channel with students, will be made available to all faculty.

CMS Forums

The CMS Project Office will be hosting Campus Forums on the dates listed below:

Tuesday, March 20, 10:30-11:30am, University Union (3rd floor) Summit Room

Wednesday, March 21, 8:30-9:30am, University Union (2nd floor) Forest Suite

Please plan to join the team on either March 20 or March 21 to obtain the latest information about the Student Administration implementation. No RSVP.

Dining Services Welcomes MEGO

Mediterranean To Go 'MEGO' officially opens on the Sacramento State campus on Monday, March 5, 2007. Located in the Riverfront Center, MEGO will be open Mon. - Thurs. 7:30 a.m. - 5:30 p.m. and Friday 7:30 a.m. - 2:00 p.m. Selis Koker is the owner/operator of MEGO, and she writes:

"Our menu is a true blend of the cuisines of the countries surrounding the Mediterranean Sea. Our goal is to provide Sac State students and staff with fresh, healthy choices. Mediterranean cuisine commonly features ingredients already familiar to the United States palate. For example one popular lunch item is pauté, a giant stuffed baked potato loaded with mozzarella cheese and choice of meats and vegetables, topped with delicious dressings. Other lunch items include gyro sandwiches and pitas. They come in two choices freshly carved from the cone in the vertical broiler in front of your eyes. Unique panini sandwiches are another option on our menu. Whichever your choice is, we guarantee that it will be a delight for your taste buds and a good choice for your health!"

Outstanding Teacher -- Samantha Hens

Samantha Hens isn't above imitating a primate to make a point.

"With a large classroom of students, it's difficult to have a real group discussion. But you can make it fun," says the anthropology professor. "I don't mind walking around like a chimpanzee if it will help students learn and keep them engaged."

That willingness to do what it takes to engage students is one of the reasons Hens thinks she was selected to receive this year's Outstanding Teaching Award for the College of Social Sciences and Interdisciplinary Studies. She thinks her students also appreciate her organizational skills and that she holds students to well-defined standards.

"I'm really organized. And my expectations of what is required of them are very clear," she says. "Students tell me that the course requirements are spelled out. They know what they need to do to achieve the grade they want. I lay the groundwork for their success, but ultimately it is up to them to achieve."

Hens extends those high standards to her own teaching. "When I look at my teaching evaluations, I read all the comments and make adjustments," she says. "Most of the student comments are very favorable. I don't get many negatives but I respond and adapt to the ones I do get," she says. "I refine my courses each and every time I teach them. I seldom rest on my laurels. There is always something new or innovative going on in the field that I can bring to the class lecture and discussion. I value student feedback.

"I'm also very approachable. I have a constant open door policy. The students sense that I care about their academic experience. And I am compassionate about their personal lives."

Though her teaching gets great reviews from students, it wasn't in her original career plans. "When I was getting my Ph.D. I wanted to do research. And I envisioned doing that for the rest of my life," she says. "Then I realized I wanted more of a balance. Teaching is a nice complement."

Hens teaches graduate and upper-division courses as well as larger general education classes.

Outside the classroom, she has been involved with research on the growth and development of orangutans. She also spent last summer at the University of Bologna examining age-related changes on human remains from a local cemetery. A lab manual she wrote for introductory anthropology courses is expected to be released in January.

Hens feels that her research outside the classroom is a benefit to her students. "If you have a regular research career you are in a better position to guide the students. Stories about your field work make it real for the students and engages them," she says. "You need to be current about what's going on in the field. And the only way to be current is if you're involved."

She says maintaining a current research schedule also helps with networking opportunities for her students, whom she encourages to attend conferences and present papers.

But of all the roles she plays as a professor—researcher, mentor—there's one that she values most. "Teaching is by far, the most important aspect of my position," she says. "I never mind walking into a classroom. It's always a positive experience."

World Music Festival presents the Mozart of Indian artists

The World Music Festival continues as renowned Indian classical artists Ravikiran and Tarun Bhattacharya perform at 6 p.m., Sunday, March 11 at the Music Recital Hall.

Ravikiran will perform on the chitraveena, a slide instrument considered to be a cross between the north Indian sitar and the Hawaiian steel guitar, representing the South Indian Karnatic music tradition. Tarun Bhattacharya, performing on the santur, will represent the North Indian Hindustani tradition. They will be joined by Akkarai Subhalakshmi on violin, Tanmoy Bose on tabla and Ananth R. Krishnan on mrdangam.

Ravikiran, hailed as the Mozart of Indian music, made headlines as the world's youngest prodigy at the age of two. He could identify and demonstrate 325 ragas, 175 talas and answer numerous other music-related questions. He has toured around the world several times and performed throughout the world, including previous performances in Sacramento.

Tarun Bhattacharya is one of the leading players of Santur today. Groomed by his father Robi Bhattacharya, a disciple of the late Radhika Mohan Moitra, and later of Dulal Roy, he is presently under the special training of Pandit Ravi Shankar.

Admission is $12 general, $6 students, and tickets may be purchased at the door or in advance at the Sacramento State Ticket Office, 278-4323.
