University has highest-ever spring enrollment

The spring semester saw a record-breaking number of students enrolled at Sacramento State.

A total of 27,314 students were enrolled, according to recent data from the Office of Academic Affairs, up nearly 600 from last year's 26,727.

"We had a strong fall enrollment, and we retained freshmen into the spring semester," says Larry Glasmire, director of special programs and enrollment analysis. "Another reason is the surge in high school students taking college courses through the University's Accelerated College Entrance program."

The University has been working to meet its enrollment targets after a number of years falling below growth projections. "Overall, this year, the campus is within .5 percent of its target," says Glasmire.

Sacramento State continued to enroll a diverse student body. Increases were seen in almost all ethnic minority categories, including a 7.3 percent increase in African American students and a 7.6 percent increase in Native American students.

Student retention efforts have been stepped up as well. "There have been a number of new retention activities this year," says Tom Griffith, assistant vice president for Student Affairs. "Freshmen are required to come for academic and career advising during orientation, which is now mandatory. Instead of waiting for students to come to their advisors, the advisors are there to guide them from the beginning."

Griffith added that research indicates a major factor in retention lies with students developing positive, nurturing relationships early in their college careers.

Academic departments also boosted retention efforts by making calls in August and January to 4,000 eligible continuing students who hadn't registered for the fall and spring semesters.

"Both faculty and staff were making the phone calls," Griffith says. "And most of the time they were able to help the students clear whatever hurdle was keeping them from registering again." The Advising Center and Financial Aid were available as back-ups to handle any questions or problems relating to their respective areas.

Alumni donors to support faculty development

Efforts to improve professional development opportunities for faculty are getting a boost from the University Advancement's Annual Fund program.

The fund solicits contributions from alumni and other friends of the University through phonathon, direct mail and other campaigns. Beginning this year, the majority of the proceeds from the fund—more than $150,000 as of the end of February—are being allocated for faculty development.

Joseph Sheley, provost and vice president for academic affairs, says, "We really appreciate that the Office of University Advancement has committed this money to the academic side. It sends a positive message."

Sheley is meeting with the deans to determine the best way to handle the distribution of the funds and what kinds of faculty development it could provide. Possibilities might include travel to conferences, seed money for projects, or research supplies. They are also trying to determine whether to spend it during the remainder of the year or roll it over into next year and combine it with other funds.

"Whatever we do, we want to set it up such that it is a clear and predictable use over time," Sheley says.

The Annual Fund is expected to exceed its $300,000 goal for the 2006-07 fiscal year and already has brought in more than $240,000. Of that more than $92,000 was allocated to specific programs and will be distributed according to donor requests. The remaining $152,000 in unrestricted funds will be made available to the provost for faculty development.

The Annual Fund solicits unrestricted contributions from alumni of the University, and at the same time seeks to expand the alumni donor base.

The program includes the Call Center, where student employees call alumni to let them know what is happening on campus and, as a result, encourage support. There is also a direct mail component and the President's Circle, which includes alumni, friends of the University, faculty, staff and business and community leaders.

Exhibition documents a wife's battle with ovarian cancer

"Body Image/Body Essence," Massachusetts artist John Magnan's powerful response to his wife's diagnosis of ovarian cancer, will be on display from March 24 to April 27 at the Library Gallery Annex at Sacramento State.

As his wife, Mary Wellman, underwent seven years of ultimately unsuccessful treatment for ovarian cancer, Magnan channeled his fear and helplessness into wood, metal and medical castoffs, such as discarded chemotherapy ports and plastic hospital ID cards, to create art that celebrates the resilience of the human spirit.

Artistically, "Body Image/Body Essence" explores the conflict between "who I am" and "what I look like" faced by women with ovarian cancer after invasive surgery and follow-up treatments. Using hair loss, the well-known side-effect of chemotherapy, as the primary visual imagery, nearly every sculpture deals with hair or its absence.

"Body Image/Body Essence" also addresses other aspects of changed self-image, both heavy and lighthearted. Serious issues of scarring, fatigue and fertility can be found in some pieces, but so can playful explorations of "chemo brain," or hair that refuses to grow back the same as before.

Last year, Sacramento State and the UC Davis Cancer Center formed the Partnership to Reduce Cancer Health Disparities through Education, Research and Training, with a goal of combining the resources of both institutions to promote cancer awareness, prevention and early detection throughout the region, especially in medically underserved communities. The partnership has teamed up with the National Ovarian Cancer Coalition to present this exhibition.

"We're proud to be able to help bring this exhibition and the series of ovarian cancer awareness activities to our community and respective campuses," said David Earwicker, assistant vice president for Research Administration at Sacramento State and co-chair of the partnership board. "It's a compelling example of how Sacramento State and the UC Davis Cancer Center now work together on aspects of cancer research, education and awareness to benefit everyone in our region."

The partnership has planned a number of activities to increase awareness of ovarian cancer among a variety of populations. At Sacramento State, young survivors of ovarian cancer will tell their stories to nursing students, peer health educators and women's studies classes. The artist, John Magnan, will personally train student docents to lead tours of the exhibition.

The UC Davis Cancer Center will host "An Evening with Experts," a free community education forum at the UC Davis Cancer Center auditorium from 5:30 – 7:30 p.m. on April 26. It will feature scientist-physicians from UC Davis who are seeking earlier detection methods and more therapies to treat ovarian cancer.

"This exhibition gives voice to the patient's perspective," says Bonnie Raingruber, director of the Center for Health and Human Services Research at Sacramento State. "It reminds us to talk to patients during routine screenings and to educate the public about this tragic disease which is so easily ignored because of the vague nature of the symptoms."

The Library Annex Gallery is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesdays – Saturdays. Admission is free. For more information, contact the University Library Gallery at 278-4189 or visit www.sacstate-ucdccc.com.

A strategic campus conversation, an approach to excellence

The long road to an updated strategic plan for California State University will be filled with discussions and serious debate throughout the system. Sacramento State is joining the conversation from 1 – 4 p.m. on Tuesday, March 20 in the University Union Ballroom. The campus community is invited to attend the "Access to Excellence" discussion.

This campus conversation is part of a CSU effort to update "Cornerstones," a systemwide strategic document adopted a decade ago.

The meetings, being held at each of the 23 California State University campuses, will establish specific program objectives, set priorities and guide resource allocations of the next several years. They will be led by the University's Faculty Senate Executive Committee and the Office of Academic Affairs, with members of the Board of Trustees and the Chancellor's Office in attendance. General themes of the planning process will be access/outreach and excellence.

Campus participation is key to the success of the California State University's Access to Excellence strategic planning. All faculty, staff, students and alumni, as well as the campus community, are encouraged to attend the meeting.

The discussion will begin with a general introduction of Access to Excellence, followed by breakout discussions of the draft plan themes and a reporting out of discussion points to the entire group. Refreshments will be served at the conclusion of the meeting.

The resulting strategic plan will be presented for consideration by the CSU Board of Trustees prior to the end of the 2007-08 academic year. The Access to Excellence meetings were called for by a September 2006 resolution of the California State University Board of Trustees.

For more information on the "Access to Excellence" system strategic planning, visit www.calstate.edu/acadaff/system%5Fstrategic%5Fplanning/. For the full September 2006 Board of Trustees resolution, visit www.calstate.edu/BOT/Resolutions/sep2006.pdf. The Cornerstones report may be accessed at www.calstate.edu/Cornerstones/reports/cornerstones_report/.

Career fair helps students view options

Sacramento State's Career Center hosts its annual Spring Career Fair from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Wednesday, March 14, in the University Union Ballroom.

This free event is geared to graduating seniors seeking entry-level positions in a variety of fields. More than 125 potential employers, including federal, state and local government departments, nonprofit organizations and businesses will be represented. Last year's event drew 1,500 job seekers. "We encourage students to bring copies of their resume and to dress professionally," said Shari Gonzales, events specialist at the Career Center.

The Career Center offers a variety of employment services for students and alumni. The center provides career counseling, resume and cover letter critiques, interview practice, job and internship postings and computer resources for career needs.

More information on the fair, including a list of registered employers, is available at www.csus.edu/careercenter or by calling the Career Center at 278-6231.

New Faces

James Rae

Assistant Professor, Government

Background and expertise:

James Rae's expertise is in International Law and Human Rights, specifically focused on peace, justice and reconciliation in post-conflict societies. His area of research is East and Southeast Asia.

Before coming to Sacramento State, Rae worked as a researcher at the United States Institute of Peace, a non-partisan think tank funded by the U.S. Congress to help prevent, manage and resolve international conflict. His area of focus was on three distinct locales: the Cambodian peace process, sectarian conflict in Northern Ireland and war crimes in the former Yugoslavia.

"I use my experiences at USIP in the classroom to discuss the practical choices that policymakers face in developing a coherent strategy to achieve peace," says Rae. "I ask my students to face the same policy dilemmas at each stage of a conflict and debate the challenges that arise at each step of an intervention. Hopefully, this background is useful in wrestling with issues of war and peace from various perspectives: ethics, social sciences and policymaking."

Rae holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Iowa, a master's degree from American University in Washington, D.C. and a doctorate from the University of Hawai'i.

Hellen Lee-Keller

Assistant Professor, Multi-Ethnic Literatures

Background and expertise:

Hellen Lee-Keller is committed to teaching the next generation of diverse citizens, teachers and scholars as a means to promote social justice.

In her teaching, Lee-Keller encourages students to challenge their intellectual stances and to build critical reading, thinking and writing skills. "I frequently insist on collaborative activities as a means to increase students' accessibility to their peers," she explains. "For example, I have my students make oral presentations to the class or review each other's writing so that they learn from each other's work. In addition to learning valuable skills in constructive criticism, they also learn to trust their own abilities."

She is excited to be returning to the California State University system because of the students. "I'm a CSU alum and a strong supporter of making higher education available to everyone who wants it and will work for it," she says. "I find that students here are interested and interesting. They bring to the classroom an array of life experiences that allow them access to the various issues that I focus on in my courses."

Lee-Keller's areas of expertise include U.S. multi-ethnic literatures; intersections of gender and sexuality, race and ethnicity, and labor and immigration; late 19th century U.S. literature and cultures; and interdisciplinary approaches to cultural production.

In addition to her teaching, Lee-Keller was elected list editor for H-AMSTDY, an online discussion list focusing on research and teaching in the field of American studies, and for interdisciplinary or multi-disciplinary perspectives on culture.

She holds a bachelor's degree in art from UC Santa Cruz and a bachelor's degree in French from UC Irvine. She earned an master's degree in humanities from CSU Dominguez Hills, and a doctorate in literature with an emphasis on cultural studies from UC San Diego.

Campus Announcements

Staff Employee Recognition recipients announced

The recipients for the Staff Employee Recognition Program are Ardene (Auggie) Johnson, Facilities Services project supervisor; Rosita Takach, Financial Aid counseling unit coordinator; and Michael Ybarra, University Union supervising building services engineer.

Johnson is the project supervisor for Facilities Services. Johnson's nominators indicated that he is a "role model, motivating others to excellence," and "under his leadership, the Renovation and Project crew has completed quality projects in limited time frames with limited funding."

Takach is the counseling unit coordinator for the Financial Aid Office. Takach's nominator noted that she "volunteers to go with outreach staff to area high schools to give financial aid presentations," and that "she has helped Sen. Deborah Ortiz give her yearly orientations to help students apply for financial aid by the March 2 deadline."

Ybarra is the supervising building services engineer for the University Union. During the time Ybarra has been on campus, he has encouraged growth and development of the University Union especially the "implementation of new services." His nominator indicated, "Under his leadership, the expansion and remodel projects were finished on schedule and under budget."

Employees are encouraged to nominate any staff member who is deserving of the award.

Deadlines

Funding assistance available for advanced degrees

Applications are now available for the Graduate Equity Fellowship and the California Pre-Doctoral Program. The programs are sponsored by the CSU Chancellor's Office and are designed to help students complete their master's degrees and increase the pool of potential faculty.

The California Pre-Doctoral Program for undergraduate and graduate students provides $3,000 for students who have experienced economic and educational disadvantages and wish to work closely with a CSU faculty sponsor to develop a plan ultimately leading to enrollment in a doctoral program. The application deadline is March 23.

The Graduate Equity Fellowship is a $1,500 grant for students who have experienced economic and educational disadvantages. Students must meet financial and academic requirements and must be classified or conditionally classified as a graduate student in a master's degree program at Sacramento State. The application deadline is April 13.

For more information or an application, contact the Office of Graduate Diversity in River Front Center 203, call 278-3834 or e-mail jose.l.martinez@csus.edu.

Investment Faire offers financial planning information

The Benefits Office is sponsoring the 2007 Investment Faire from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. on Thursday, March 22 in the University Union Redwood Room. The event will feature representatives from various companies on the CSU Tax Sheltered Annuity 403(b) company approved list, representatives from the Department of Administration Savings Plus Program (457/401 (k)) and other programs that offer investment/financial planning options. Attendance is on a drop-in basis.

Throughout the day there will also be special educational presentations designed to further assist employees in financial planning. Presentations include:

- Financial Finesse: Unbiased information on Taxation/Tax Basics, (i.e, new rates, additional deductions, exemptions, credits payment options, filing status, etc.) from 9:30 a.m. – noon in the Orchard Suite. This workshop can assist employees in becoming more aware of simple tax filing strategies.
- CalPERS Member Home Loan Program from 12:30 – 2 p.m. in the Orchard Suite. This program offers low to no down payment options, interest-only loans, down payment assistance, 100 percent financing, discount closing costs, discounted mortgage insurance rates and many more features.

CalPERS retains CitiMortgage, Inc. as the program manager for the CalPERS Member Home Loan Program. However, CitiMortgage does not originate CalPERS Mortgage Loans. Their primary goal is to educate employees about the Home Loan Program. Handouts regarding CalPERS Home Loan vendors are available at the presentation.

Spouses/domestic partners are welcomed to attend the fair and presentations. Employees may schedule their attendance for the special presentations only by calling the Benefits Office at 278-6213 or registering at www.csus.edu/fas/traindev/train.htm.
