Course Description:

EDD 611. Legal Issues for Educational Leaders. This course examines key legal issues that govern daily and long-range decisions of educational leaders. The course focuses on understanding California and federal codes, case law, policies, and significant precedent and will emphasize analysis of key legal concepts and application of law to major areas including finance, personnel, risk management, curriculum, student services, teacher rights, torts, students rights, and access. Students will examine trends in law and the initiation and influence of educational law to positively influence educational institutions. Prerequisite: Admission into the Ed.D. in Educational Leadership Program and instructor permission. Graded: Graded Student. Units: 2.0.

Introduction and course objectives

The course will explore in a general way the field of education law and, particularly, how the law – constitutional, statutory, regulatory and case law – can be used as a tool for policy making, advocacy and system development in the field of education. It will not be possible in a two credit course to cover in depth the entire field of education law, as that field is applied in the PreK-12 education system AND in the postsecondary education system. These two fields are each distinct in their own right and each easily fills a longer course. Students will be directed to treatises in the fields of public school law and of higher education law for an overview of the branch of education law which is most related to their area of specialization.

Together, however all students will look at some core documents, such as the California Constitution, the California Education Code and certain significant federal laws that affect education. Students will go online and learn to access the CSUS library online law-related resources, particularly LexisNexis and practice using them. The class will visit a local law library and look at ANNOTATED copies of the California Education Code and Federal education laws. The class will discuss the importance legislative history in helping to unlock the meaning of ambiguous passages in a statute and learn about sources of legislative history. We will look at the way the professional case law reporter series of cases from state and federal judicial systems use keywords, annotations and head notes to help make the case more understandable. Students will learn how to “Shepardize” a case to see if it is still good law.

For the transformational educational leader, law is a policy tool. It is important for doctoral students in the field of education to learn how to use the law as a resource for transformational policy, and how to understand the ways in which policy has been expressed through statutory, regulatory and case law, including ways in which “immutable” legal principles have changed with time. Students will be expected to analyze and consider the options on some tough policy issues using the statutes, cases, regulations and legislative history as their tools. Truly transformational leaders need to be pragmatic visionaries who know how to use the tools of the state to build portfolios that advocates for the educational programs and values they believe in. Examples of areas of educational policy development which require a legal component for their realization include equal access to educational excellence, respect for minority language and culture, accommodation and acceptance of the differently able, equitable access to adequately resourced public postsecondary education. An understanding of law is also a necessary tool for addressing the changing educational landscape as it is affected by communications technology, including the evolving field of copyright law in the digital age and the problems with misuse of technology.

Following are the learning objectives for this course as set forth in the approved program documents. Note that this course syllabus will integrate some of the pre-identified assessment strategies into assignments which reflect the instructor-planned learning activities for the course.

CSU Sacramento: • EDD 611 - Legal Issues for Educational Leaders

Learning Outcomes

• Cite significant cases and their influence on key areas of educational law
• Demonstrate knowledge and apply key concepts in the major areas of school law including: pupil records, student discipline, separation of church and state, employee rights, student rights, first amendment rights, and torts.
• Analyze legal case studies and cite key legal provisions and decision points in these cases.
• Explain the interrelationship and sources of law and regulation including federal, state, local laws, codes, case law, constitution, administrative regulations, precedent, etc.

Assessment Strategies

• Analysis and presentation of case studies (20%)
• 2. Educational research assignments (3 assignments in varied areas); involving in-depth, research, critical analysis, references (40%)
• 3. Quizzes and tests on key legal concepts and their application (15%)
• Attendance and participation (15%)
• Written reflection on legal concepts and situations (10%)
4. Class presentation

At the conclusion of the program the graduate will be able to:

4. critically analyze policy perspectives shaped by political, economic, social, and cultural factors at the federal, state, and local levels

5. take effective action as a leader to address the distance between policy and organizational capacity for policy implementation

6. engage in evidence-based discussion with legislators and policymakers to impact educational reform

Format of Course
The course is taught in a seminar style. That is, students are expected to come to class prepared to participate in conversations about the materials they have read. Simply put, it will not be possible to benefit from this class without doing the readings ahead of class, participating in the class time fully and for the full duration of the class periods, completing assignments in the period between classes and at the conclusion of the law class and participating fully in the SacCT class environment. The class will involved modeling the use of statutory, regulatory and case law to help formulate and advance educational policy agendas. Students will be working with law, both together in the class and individually between sessions. The learning is integrated and scaffolded and requires full participation in every aspect.

What You Gain
The result of this class will not be an encyclopedic knowledge of education law, either in its PreK-12 aspect or its postsecondary aspect. However, the result of the class will be, for those who fully participate, the acquisition of the ability to use the law – Constitutional language, statutes and their legislative history, regulations, policies of local governing boards, adopted handbooks of policies and procedures – as an increasingly comfortable tool for effective and transformational leadership in your particular area of educational expertise.

Journal Reading.

Students will be expected to access and read at least two law review articles about a subject that they research and write upon in this course.

Assignments and Grading

Students are expected to attend class regularly, participate, and turn in assignments in a complete and professional manner. Complete and professional means proofread, well written, appropriately cited, and on time. Especially poorly written papers may be returned to be re-done at the discretion of the instructor. Especially in this format, excessive absences will be reflected in your grade.

All work will be submitted to me on-line in the SacCT site. Written assignments should be in MS Word and attached to an e-mail in the SacCT site for the class I use the computer to review student written work and must receive it in this format so that I can access it. Work must be on time if it is to receive full credit. Work may be rejected if it is late. Any student who for a good and unavoidable reason will be turning an assignment in late must contact the instructor ahead of time and make arrangements.

Class Participation   (Prompt attendance and active participation in conversations contribute to this grade.): 20%
Participation in and Initiation of Discussion on Sac CT site: 20% of grade
