A religion is a unified system of beliefs and practices relative to sacred things, that is to say, things set apart and forbidden—beliefs and practices which unite into one single moral community called a Church, all those who adhere to them.

Émile Durkheim

Religion is the sigh of the oppressed creature, the heart of a heartless world, just as it is the spirit of a spiritless situation. It is the opiate of the masses.

Karl Marx

Religion is what the individual does with his own solitariness.

Alfred North Whitehead

Religion is the human attitude towards a sacred order that includes within it all being—human or otherwise—i.e., belief in a cosmos, the meaning of which both includes and transcends man.

Peter Berger

When you believe in things you don’t understand, then you suffer . . .

COURSE SYLLABUS

SEMESTER 2

COURSE DESCRIPTION, GOALS, AND OBJECTIVES

CATALOGUE DESCRIPTION
Comparative inquiry into the nature of global religions. Hinduism, Buddhism, Confucianism, Daoism, Judaism, Christianity and Islam will be studied. Material and social aspects of these religions will be considered along with primary beliefs and practices. The common yearning to experience the divine and the numinous will be emphasized. Note: Fulfills “Intensive Writing” requirement; fulfills three units of C3 General Education requirement. Prerequisite: Passing score on the WPE.

COURSE DESCRIPTION:
The differences among the definitions of “religion” quoted above indicate how difficult it is to understand what exactly is meant by this term. Is religion, as experienced by human beings, truly an expression of the relationship between humanity and the sacred, or simply a “sigh of the oppressed”? With these kinds of questions in mind, this course explores how different cultures come to define the historical, cultural, and philosophical dimensions of the “religious experience.” Using both primary and secondary source material, the course focuses on the traditions of Buddhism, Hinduism, and other non-Western traditions, and their relationship to Judaism, Christianity, and Islam.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:
While one of the goals of this course is to arrive at an intellectual understanding of different religious traditions of the world, another is to begin to appreciate the importance of these traditions for those people who practice them. In order to do this, it will be necessary to be open to the traditions on different levels. Toward this end, we will seek to explore different traditions without forcing them to fit within the boundaries of our own religious experiences. In other words, our emphasis will not be on demonstrating which tradition is “true,” but on seeking to understand how important a given tradition is for those who adhere to it.

- Identify, explain, and analyze the ideological perspectives revealed by course materials
- Apply the techniques of formal analysis to various works within interdisciplinary contexts
- Understand and appreciate the distinction between descriptive and analytical writing and be able to use this knowledge to produce conceptually based essays
- Compare and contrast basic values and behaviors of various Western and non-Western cultures that have influenced the identity of the “World’s Religions”
- Appreciate the diversity of Religious culture

REQUIRED TEXTS:

William Oxtoby and Alan Segal: A Concise Introduction to World Religions

Barbara Stoller Miller, tr.: The Bhagavad-Gita

Jack Kornfield: Teachings of the Buddha

Abdullah Yusaf Ali, tr.: Qur’an

Michael Coogan, ed.: The Oxford Annotated Bible
COURSE REQUIREMENTS:

1) As an Intensive Writing offering, this course demands more than the normal workload from students. Students should be able to read, digest, and analyze 100-200 pages of complex material per week. Students should also expect to produce assignments that meet the University requirement for Writing Intensive courses: not less than 5000 words (approximately 16 pages) of written work. In this class, approximately 2/3 of this written work will be submitted during the course of the semester and 1/3 during finals week. All written work is expected to be both substantively and stylistically appropriate for college level courses. The instructor will return written assignments with extensive comments addressing both areas of concern. Should my comments not be sufficient to help the student improve his or her writing without further assistance, I recommend that students come to me for more help and/or visit the Writing Center.

2) Students are expected to complete all reading by the date for which it has been assigned.

3) You will submit twelve questions and short answers (1 to 1 ½ pages) dealing with assigned reading material (see “Question Due Dates” below for due dates). You should take these question and answer assignments seriously; use them to help you to understand the material more thoroughly and to prepare yourself for your exams. They should be well-reasoned inquiries that are stylistically and grammatically appropriate. These questions will be worth ten (10) points each, for a total of 120 total points. Students will be asked to present at least one of their questions/answers in class. These short assignments constitute 1/3 of the writing requirement for the course; approximately 12-15 pages of written material. All questions/answers must be submitted in class on the day that they are due! Questions/answers will not be accepted by e-mail. In order to receive credit for these assignments, you must attend the full class session—don’t drop papers on the table in front of the room and leave before class begins; and don’t leave after the break!

4) Students will be given two in-class essay “mid-term” exams worth 50 points each. These in-class mid-term exams will constitute 1/3 of the writing requirement for the course; approximately 5-8 pages of written material.

5) Students will submit a take-home essay exam (8-10 pages) exploring the material from Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. This assignment will be worth 80 points. The assignment will be due during finals week. You will receive a detailed essay prompt for this assignment two (2) weeks before it is due. This take-home assignment will constitute 1/3 of the writing requirement for the course; approximately 8-10 pages of written work.

6) I will be happy to discuss any of the course material with you; I will also be happy to read any drafts or outlines you might complete before your essays are due. Please do not hesitate to come by my office or to e-mail me.

7) Students must have passed the WPE in order to be enrolled in World Religions.

If you have other work to do on your computer or simply want to play games or watch videos, do those things somewhere else!

ACADEMIC HONESTY:
The Sac State Catalogue says the following about Academic Honesty:

The principles of truth and honesty are recognized as fundamental to a community of scholars and teachers. California State University, Sacramento expects that faculty, staff, and students will honor these principles, and in so doing, will protect the integrity of academic work and student grades. Students are expected to know and abide by university policy about cheating, including plagiarism. The entire document, Policies and Procedures Regarding Academic Honesty, may be found on the university’s web site.

Cheating will not be tolerated in this course. If you cheat by using disallowed sources, copying from someone else’s paper, or plagiarizing, you will receive a failing grade for the course. You are also subject to being expelled from the university. University Policy Manual Library’s Plagiarism Website
