ETHNOGRAPHIC ANALYSIS

The first suggestion is that what I know, in part (because we can only know a part of what we study), comes from an intensive engagement with a history of the people and the issues. This needs always to be done from primary sources, for five decades of anthropology have shown me that secondary sources almost always misrepresent what happened. But the key here is to never do history in terms of what happened, for that is the most naïve and simplistic kind of history, useful only as a starting point. The point is to see what gets carved into people’s bodies, into the landscape of their lives, what reemerges, inescapably, in confrontation with their present and their future. History, exactly like the utterly naïve anthropological concept of culture, is not something that people just have: it is something they often must struggle against, whether they want to or not.

Learning Objectives—The term ethnography refers to both a qualitative research methodology and the written product resulting from that work. As the hallmark of sociocultural anthropology, ethnographic research and writing is critical to the production of anthropological knowledge. This course is designed to 1) introduce students to the basic techniques of ethnographic research, 2) familiarize them with the varieties of ethnographic writing that fall within this genre—from both a historical and contemporary perspective, and 3) engage them in the epistemological and methodological debates that animate the contemporary field of sociocultural anthropology.

Course Orientation—Each semester, this course achieves its learning objectives by examining a suite of ethnographic readings related to a specific society, process, social issue, or dimension of the human condition. This semester, ethnography in and of Native North America will be the focus of our analytic lens.

We will read five ethnographies (each with its own distinctive ambitions, theoretical moorings, and methodological strategies), along with a series of articles—both current and historical, in order to flesh out the broad, disciplinary contours of contemporary ethnographic inquiry and debate. At the same time, these works will train our attention upon the particular poetics and politics associated with ethnographic research in and among the Indigenous communities of North America.

Course Requirements—Attendance, completion of all reading and in-class assignments, meaningful participation in class discussion.

Course Evaluation—Your grade will be based on in-class assignments—including (no fewer than) 11 announced and unannounced reading quizzes* (25%); participation in seminar discussions [50% of this score is based on one 5-7 min. in-class presentation/critique of a reading assignment] (25%); a mid-term exam (25%); and a final essay exam (25%). *You will need 15 scantron 815E quizzstrips.

Grading Scale—A (92-100%); A- (90-91%); B+ (88-89%); B (82-87%); B-(80-81%); C+(78-79%); C (72-77%); C- (70-71%); D+ (68-69%); D (62-67%); D-(60-61%); F (59% and below).

Make-up/Late Paper Policy—No missed assignments (including reading quizzes) can be made up (even for excused absences), although your lowest reading quiz score will be dropped. Final essays (if take-home), will be marked down 15 points for each day late.

Cell Phones & Pagers—Please turn these off during class, unless you have an emergency and notify me ahead of time. Thanks in advance for your cooperation.

Academic Dishonesty—Plagiarism and other forms of cheating will result in a score of zero on the assignment, followed by dismissal from the course. I am very serious about this. Please review the university’s official policy: http://www.csus.edu/umanual/student/UMA00150.htm.

LOCUS — I will use LOCUS <http://locus.csus.edu/locus2005/index.php> to help manage the course, to deliver announcements and essay topics to you, and to make many of the reserve readings available to you electronically (through either PDFs or stable URLs). You will need to login using your saclink username and password. After this, you will need to enroll in the class using (again) your saclink account and the password for our course: _______.
