Y or N

1. According to our English 20 Grading Guidelines, a passing paper should provide support for its generalizations.

2. According to our English 20 Grading Guidelines, the major difference between a passing paper and a failing paper is the length of the paper. Passing papers must be between 5-7 pages.

3. Our English 20 Grading Guidelines do not assume that you already know how to write an argumentative paper. It is the purpose of English 20 to show you how to do this.

4. According to our English 20 Grading Guidelines, a passing paper must be organized at all levels. In other words, every sentence and paragraph must follow a central plan.

5. According to our English 20 Grading Guidelines, a C paper does not need to give specific examples. That is a requirement that only applies to A and B papers.

6. According to our English 20 Grading Guidelines, the difference between an A or B paper and a C paper is that a C paper can address problems that are simplistic or formulaic whereas A and B papers must deal with complex analytical arguments.