Teach ON-line Summer Camp
Call for Faculty Camp Counselors

With the continuing uncertainties in Fall 2020 given the COVID-19 crisis and the potential of continued need to offer extensive virtual, online, or hybrid instruction, we are offering Teach ON-line Summer Camp for faculty to learn how, and to have the time, to convert existing classes into effective online or blended courses. Summer Camp goals include improving the virtual experience for both students and faculty, and maximizing learning, engagement, and success. We are seeking experienced faculty members to serve as Camp Counselors to help mentor and facilitate sessions of Campers who are newer to the online experience.

The Teach ON-line Summer Camp will include workshops and presentations on topics such as:
- Deeper learning by design: Making courses more coherent, connected and consequential;
- Building authentic assessments;
- Models and modalities of online learning (e.g., synchronous, asynchronous, and hybrid);
- Universal Design for Learning (UDL)/accessibility/captioning;
- Open Education Resources (OER) and other immersive learning technologies;
- Equity, diversity and inclusion;
- Technology how-to sessions.

Camp Counselor Time Commitment:
Sessions are planned starting Monday, June 22, 2020 – Sunday, July 26, 2020, with a tentative third session in August; programming is via mostly asynchronous mentoring, additional intermittent work between late May through June 21, and intermittent asynchronous virtual work through August.

Camp Counselor Compensation:
Up to $7,500 (depending on number of sessions mentored) in the form of additional employment. Compensation will be provided after the completion of all work in early Fall 2020.

Camp Counselor Responsibilities:
Faculty Camp Counselors will help plan and build Teach ON-line Summer Camp and present during it. They will also be expected to mentor and facilitate a cohort of faculty and work with them individually on their online course development during the Camp, and in our Community Support Network after Camp.

Camper Responsibilities and Deliverables:
Before Teach On-line Summer Camp, faculty campers are expected to complete basic prerequisites including the following (all accepted campers will receive instructions for these three items):

1. Request a Canvas development course from IRT;
2. Download the Quality Matters template from Canvas Commons; and
3. Review material to ensure basic knowledge and understanding of Canvas and Zoom.
All campers in the program will receive instructions for the above items before Summer Camp begins.

During Teach ON-line Summer Camp, faculty campers are expected to:

a) Participate in asynchronous camp activities during Summer Camp and our Community Support Network during and after Summer Camp.

b) Submit to their respective Camp Counselor within their Canvas course(s) an online or blended course plan for the Fall 2020 semester, a course syllabus, a welcome module, and day-by-day detailed plans (content, presentations, assignments, etc.) for the first two weeks of class, and

c) Create a short (up to three-minute video) in which they will share their experience developing the materials for their course(s) to the campus community. Highlighted videos will be presented in Fall 2020 during a virtual showcase.”

Camp Counselors will provide a review and guidance to each faculty camper. More specifics will be provided during Summer Camp.

Criteria for Selection of Camp Counselors:

- Experience in distance learning and knowledge of best practices in remote instruction (e.g., Course Redesign with Technology, QM training or some equivalent);
- Experience with course design and assessment;
- Ability to contribute to department, college, and university priorities, goals, and objectives;
- A commitment to equity, diversity and inclusion;
- Ability to guide and lead a large group of faculty (collectively and individually), and provide constructive feedback to them on remote instruction.

Camp Counselor Application Process:

Submit an online application by Friday, May 22 at 5 PM

Apply Here! If the link doesn’t work, cut and paste the following: https://bit.ly/campctl-counselor

The online application form will ask you to identify your current position at Sacramento State, identify courses you have taught online or taught in any other remote format, how long you have taught online, provide a narrative of online models used and successful implementations of remote instruction and explain how you would be a successful faculty Camp Counselor. A selection committee will review the online applications and acceptance will be communicated to applicants by May 29, 2020.

Leadership and Support Team:
Teach ON-line Summer Camp will be led by the Center for Teaching and Learning, in partnership with Information Technology and Resources and the College of Continuing Education, along with faculty Camp Counselors, who will work with a cohort of faculty Campers as they develop their specific remote course(s).
