Justification for course proposal:

This course is being modified to fit with new program requirements (please see appropriate form B); a significant portfolio project that becomes part of a student's e-portfolio is being added to the course and the number of units changed appropriately (4-unit course).

Includes minor editorial change to the course title.

Course Description: (Not to exceed 80 words and language should conform to catalog copy.)

Between the end of the Civil War and the outbreak of World War I, there was an unprecedented and transforming social and cultural change in American life. During this time, literature also radically contributed to ideas about the nature of fiction, the reality it represented, and its effects on readers. Students will study the historical development of realism in literature and the current status of theories of literary realism.
