Title of the Program:

MA in Anthropology

Designation: (degree terminology)

Master of Arts

Briefly describe the program proposal (new or change) and provide a justification:

The program proposal makes the following changes to the existing MA program:

(1) Change in degree requirements to include Graduate Writing Intensive (GWI) courses in response to changes in the GVAR requirement. This change is reflected in two locations of the proposed catalog: (a) under 'Advancement to Candidacy' and 'Program Requirements' footnote 1. The four anthropology core seminars will serve as GWI courses (see associated Form A for each course). Students are required to pass two core seminars with a minimum grade of 'B-' to count towards the degree; students will be required to earn a minimum grade of 'B' in a core seminar to count towards the GWI requirement.

(2) Change in placement of footnote 3 under Program Requirements. The last catalog change clarified graduate-level course requirements from earlier copies, but footnote 3 was inadvertently omitted from 'Elective Graduate Seminars' and 'Elective Graduate Course' and only placed under 'General Electives'.

(3) Minor changes regarding admission requirements: (a) shift to one set of transcripts from two sets, along with updated submission instructions from Office of Graduate Studies; (b) more specific language regarding the statement of intent; (c) introduced language that applicants may submit a CV/Resume.

(4) Removal of the third paragraph of the Program Description to condense this section.

Objectives of the degree program:

The Master of Arts program in Anthropology is designed for students who plan to continue their graduate studies in Anthropology at the Ph.D. level as well as for students who plan to pursue any of the numerous opportunities for graduate anthropologists, such as in private research, cultural resource management, private foundations, Foreign Service, education, and government.

Program Description

The Master of Arts program in Anthropology is designed for students who plan to continue their graduate studies in Anthropology at the Ph.D. level as well as for students who plan to pursue any of the numerous opportunities for graduate anthropologists, such as in private research, cultural resource management, private foundations, Foreign Service, education, and government.

The program provides general graduate-level training in four interrelated fields: sociocultural anthropology, archaeology, biological anthropology, and linguistic anthropology. Beyond this foundation, each student designs a plan of coursework specific to their post-graduate goals in one of the four subfields. Students are then expected to demonstrate mastery of their subfield by preparing a thesis of original scholarly research.

Students may develop their special interests through individual arrangements with their faculty advisors, or they may take advantage of opportunities for special training in such areas of Applied Anthropology as cultural resource management, museology, Anthropology in education, and medical Anthropology through participation in ongoing informal programs which may include special field work or intern placement with local agencies. Prospective students should visit the department website or contact the Graduate Coordinator for updated information on special opportunities.
