This course replaces experimental course Subject Area (prefix) and Catalog Nbr (course number):
If changing an existing course, should new version be considered a repeat of the original version? If so, the same Course ID will be maintained. If not, a new Course ID will be assigned. Note: In PeopleSoft terminology, the Course ID is the unique system identifier, not the Catalog Nbr.

Description of the Expected Learning Outcomes: Describe outcomes using the following format: “Students will be able to: 1), 2), etc.” See the example at http://www.csus.edu/acaf/example.htm

Students will be able to:
1) Work with primary sources, including both assessment of sources and building an essay with primary documents.
2) Construct persuasive arguments based upon historical evidence.
3) Develop critical reading and historical analysis.
4) Compare and contrast different historical moments or cultural systems in Western Europe, Asia, and Africa.
5) Understand the impact of the colonial empires on the development of the contemporary global, political, and economic order.

Attach a list of the required/recommended course readings and activities [Note: it is understood that these are updated and modified as needed by the instructor(s).] This attachment should be forwarded only to your Dean’s office, not Academic Affairs.

Assessment Strategies: A description of the assessment strategies (e.g., portfolios, examinations, performances, pre-and post-tests, conferences with students, student papers) which will be used by the instructor to determine the extent to which students have achieved the learning outcomes noted above:

The Rise and Fall of European Colonial Empires
History 134

Professor Michael G. Vann
mikevann@csus.edu
Tahoe 3087
(916) 278-4163
Office Hours: XXXXXX

Catalog Description: History 134 covers the origins of European colonialism in the Iberian expansion, the development of English and Dutch empires, the role of spices, slaves, sugar, and opium in the making of the modern global economy, the “New Imperialism” of the 19th Century, the anti-colonialist and nationalist movements, and the final collapse of the empires after World War Two.

Course Description:
History 134 covers the colonial expansion of Western Europe from the fifteenth century to the twentieth century. Beginning with Iberian expansion into North Africa and the islands of the Eastern Atlantic, the course examines the conquest of the Americas, the spice trade and its connection to modern capitalism, the sugar and slave economies of the Atlantic system, the “New Imperialism” of the nineteenth century, the Scramble for Africa, the racial nature of colonial rule, the varieties of resistance movements, and the process of decolonization.

The readings for History 134 are a combination of secondary and primary sources. The primary sources give students an example of the perspective of the individuals engaged in both sides of the colonial encounter. The secondary sources will provide students will a narrative of the stages of Western colonialism and imperialism or will present an analysis of specific social, economic, or cultural aspects of the subject matter.

History 134 satisfies the General Education requirement for Area C1: the Arts and Humanities, World Civilizations.

Course Objectives:
As an introduction to colonialism and imperialism this course emphasizes breadth over depth. In terms of subject matter, History 134 covers:
• The European transformation of the Americas, India, and Southeast Asia
• The colonial origins of global capitalism
• The political impact of the “New Imperialism”
• “Race” and racism in the colonies
• Collaboration and resistance

In addition to amassing the above historical knowledge, students will sharpen the following skills. Students will be able to:
1) Work with primary sources, including both assessment of sources and building an essay with primary documents.
2) Construct persuasive arguments based upon historical evidence.
3) Develop critical reading skills and historical analysis.
4) Compare and contrast different historical moments or cultural systems in Western Europe, Asia, and Africa.
5) Understand the impact of the colonial empires on the development of the contemporary global, political, and economic order.

Required Reading:
Course reader containing articles and book chapters
Ames, Vasco da Gama: Renaissance Crusader
Curtin, The World and the West: The European Challenge and the Overseas Response in the Age of Empire
Fanon, The Wretched of the Earth
Gandhi, All Men are Brothers
Leon-Portillo, Broken Spears: The Aztec Account of the Conquest of Mexico

Required Viewing:
Burn!
A Passage to India
The Battle of Algiers
Selected short clips in lecture
All will be screened in class

Course Requirements:
Geography test 10% of final grade
Two in-class exams each 20% of final grade
Two Take-Home Essay each 10% of final grade
Final Exam 20% of final grade
Random in-class quizzes all 10% of final grade

Students will receive a study guide for the exams that includes possible identification terms and possible essay topics. Students will receive a similar study guide for the geography test. The quizzes will be a surprise and there will be no study guides. For the take-home papers students will receive a list of topics based upon the course readings, lectures, and films. Students must demonstrate a command of the primary and secondary sources when answering the essay question. Essays based upon outside material may not be accepted. The paper will be no longer than five typed pages (roughly 1,250 words). A rough draft must be submitted with each completed essay.

Lectures:
Monday & Wednesday, XXX:00-XXX-15, XXX

Lecture attendance is required and roll may be taken either by signing in on a list or by a quiz. Students should know that all material presented in the lectures may appear on the exams.

The lectures are a complement to the course readings, designed to reinforce the texts but not repeat the texts. The lectures will not simply review the information contained in the course readings; indeed sometimes the lectures and the readings will not dovetail as nicely as we may wish. Rather, the lectures will serve several functions: to provide a framework to understand the wide variety of information in the readings; to call attention to crucial historical moments and personalities from the period we are exploring; to analyze aspects of some of the assigned primary sources; to present selected visual images (slides and videos); and to provide an opportunity for the students to raise questions and discuss aspects of the course material. To make the most of what the lectures have to offer, students should come prepared and have completed the course readings.

The list of lecture subjects is tentative. While I will do my best to stick to the list, university professors often do fall in love with the sound of the their own voices and have been known to go a little long on some subjects. Furthermore, events such as special events on campus, unforeseen administrative issues, labor actions, acts of piracy, and/or extreme weather phenomenon may create the need for some creative alterations.

Random quizzes on the readings and on the lectures will be administered in class. Quizzes may not be made up without a reasonable explanation for the absence. As I set the bar for a "reasonable explanation" very high, very few missed quizzes are actually made up. Thus, you need to make a serious effort to be in class and on time or your grade will suffer for it.

That said, I do realize that you have something called a "life" and that work and family obligations and emergencies can and will intrude upon the sanctity of our classroom. If you have some "complications" immediately contact me, discretely if you wish, to keep me abreast of your situation. I am happy to work with students who take responsibility for their affairs. However, I do have some difficulties dealing students who come in the day of an exam and unload what appears to have been a preventable crisis upon my already very messy desk.

If you have a disability and require accommodations, you need to provide disability documentation to SSWD, Lassan 1008, (916) 278-6955. Please discuss your accommodations needs with me after class or during my office hours early in the semester.

Online Discussion
The course has a SacCT component. SacCT provides a discussion section on the website. I will moderate the discussion topics. Both you and I may start topics, but I will keep them on topic and appropriate to the course material. Your regular participation in the SacCT discussion may earn you up to 5% extra credit on your final grade. Hence, if you have a B and you participate in a serious and substantial manner on SacCT, your final grade will be raised to an A-. Furthermore, participation in the SacCT discussions should help your grade on the exams.

Late work:
One of the skills you need to acquire at Sacramento State is the ability to manage your time and complete work by set deadlines. Thus, for each day your take-home essay is late, it will go down a grade level (example: from A- to B+ or B to B-).

Technology in the Classroom
Cell phones must be turned off or put on vibrate. If your cell phone rings in class, be prepared for good-natured abuse from the podium. Please do not text message in class. This is extremely rude and distracting. If it is an emergency, please politely and quietly excuse yourself and handle your affairs in the hallway.

While some students find taking notes on laptops to be a useful and efficient system of work, laptops can be a distraction to you, your neighbors, and to me. More seriously, students have abused the privilege of using laptops in the past and I am now inclined to view them as distracting, not beneficial. Thus, I discourage their use. If you would like to use a laptop and have a legitimate reason for it, please explain why to me and if you are allowed to use it in class make sure your typing is not a disturbance. Please do not surf the internet or play online poker in-class. While this is simply a silly waste of your own time, you may also be distracting those behind you and next to you. Listening to an iPod in class, even with just one earbud in, is just rude. If you do this you will be asked to leave immediately. Keep in mind that ringing cell phones, distracting computer use, and other annoying technological invasions may cause me to either lose my place in lecture or have to stop lecture to deal with the issue. This will waste the time of everyone in the classroom.

Academic Dishonesty:
While this will come as a surprise to the vast majority of you, there are some students who do try to break the rules in order to get a better grade. Such morally reprehensible behavior bears the ugly name of "Academic Dishonesty." The CSUS website contains the following essential information regarding Academic Dishonesty:

"DEFINITIONS OF ACADEMIC DISHONESTY
A. CHEATING. At CSUS, cheating is the act of obtaining or attempting to obtain credit for academic work through the use of any dishonest, deceptive, or fraudulent means. Cheating at CSUS includes but is not limited to:
1. Copying, in part or in whole, from another's test or other evaluation instrument;
2. Using crib notes, "cheat sheets," or any other device, including electronic devices, in aid of writing the exam not permitted by the instructor;
3. Submitting work previously graded in another course unless doing so has been approved by the course instructor or by department policy.
4. Submitting work simultaneously presented in more than one course, unless doing so has been approved by the respective course instructors or by the department policies of the respective departments.
5. Altering or interfering with grading or grading instructions;
6. Sitting for an examination by a surrogate, or as a surrogate;
7. Any other act committed by a student in the course of his or her academic work that defrauds or misrepresents, including aiding or abetting in any of the actions defined above.

B. PLAGIARISM: Plagiarism is a form of cheating. At CSUS plagiarism is the use of distinctive ideas or works belonging to another person without providing adequate acknowledgement of that person’s contribution. Regardless of the means of appropriation, incorporation of another’s work into one’s own requires adequate identification and acknowledgement. Plagiarism is doubly unethical because it deprives the author of rightful credit and gives credit to someone who has not earned it. Acknowledgement is not necessary when the material used is common knowledge.

Plagiarism at CSUS includes but is not limited to:

1. The act of incorporating into one’s own work the ideas, words, sentences, paragraphs, or parts thereof, or the specific substance of another’s work without giving appropriate credit thereby representing the product as entirely one's own. Examples include not only word-for-word copying, but also the "mosaic" (i.e., interspersing a few of one’s own words while, in essence, copying another’s work), the paraphrase (i.e., rewriting another’s work while still using the other’s fundamental idea or theory); fabrication (i.e., inventing or counterfeiting sources), ghost-writing (i.e., submitting another’s work as one’s own) and failure to include quotation marks on material that is otherwise acknowledged; and

2. Representing as one’s own another’s artistic or scholarly works such as musical compositions, computer programs, photographs, paintings, drawing, sculptures, or similar works.¹

See the University Policy Manual for the rest of what the University thinks about such repugnant acts (Please note that I cited the words of the CSUS website in quotation marks and provided a footnote that directs the readers to where my information came from.).
