Dr. Jessica Bagger is a management professor at Sacramento State and associated faculty at the University of Gothenburg in Sweden. Jessica promotes employee productivity and wellbeing and organization effectiveness and success through her research, teaching, training, and consulting on management and leadership topics. She teaches at the Executive MBA levels both in the United States and in Sweden on topics including leadership, organizational design and management, strategic human resources, executive decision making, teamwork, and case analysis. Jessica has served on the boards of the Sacramento Employers Advisory Council and the Capitol Region chapter of the American Red Cross and she is currently one of six Associate Editors at Scandinavian Journal of Management.

Jessica’s scientific research relates to factors impacting employee well-being and performance, including HR systems, leadership, and organizational culture. She has ongoing research with colleagues internationally and has had her research published in top academic journals including Journal of Management, Journal of Applied Psychology, International Journal of Selection & Assessment, Organizational Behavior and Human Decision Processes, and Human Performance.

Faculty Scholarship

Refereed Journal Articles

Journal Article, Academic Journal

Other Intellectual Contributions

Online (peer-reviewed) encyclopedia

Reb, J., Bagger, J. (2010). The role of anticipated regret in work-family decisions. Society for Industrial and Organizational Psychology.

Manuscript

