CALL FOR PAPERS: CALIFORNIA’S RESPONSE TO THE PANDEMIC

The California Journal of Politics and Policy (CJPP) is looking to publish a set of papers on the response to the COVID-19 pandemic in California. We are seeking articles and commentary about policy choices, administrative decisions, and political dynamics. Examples of appropriate topics include but are by no means not limited to:

- Explanations of how and why institutional responses varied across the state (e.g., different approaches to court closures among counties);
- Analyses of which institutional changes during the pandemic are likely to endure and which are likely to be temporary;
- Examinations of how the pandemic affected legislative decisions; and
- Explorations of how pandemic responses influenced political campaigns in 2020.

Note that CJPP is an open access journal. See our submission guidelines for details about types of manuscripts accepted and review policy.

Please contact journal editor Ted Lascher (Department of Public Policy and Administration, Sacramento State) at tedl@csus.edu if you want to discuss an idea for inclusion in the CJPP.
