

Student Internships

Philosophy 195 is a student internship course that allows Philosophy majors to earn upper-division credit for working a job in which philosophical issues are raised.. Students work under the supervision of a faculty member. Talk to any faculty advisor if you are interested in pursuing an internship.

Philosophy 195 Course Description:
Supervised work experience in an approved office or organization where significant philosophical issues are raised. The student must write regular reports on these issues. Supervision is provided by the faculty instructor and a managing official in the work situation. Open to majors only. Prerequisite: Instructor permission. Graded: Credit/NoCredit. 1.0-3.0 units.