

Dr. Shixun Sherman Zhang is an accomplished educator and professional in the field of Computer Information Systems and Artificial Intelligence. With over two decades of teaching experience, Dr. Zhang brings a wealth of knowledge and expertise to his roles. Currently serving as an adjunct faculty member at COB, California State University, Sacramento, Dr. Zhang teaches courses in MIS and Computer Science. His dedication to education extends beyond the classroom as continually explores innovative teaching methods and stays abreast of the latest developments in his field.

Dr. Zhang, Sherman received MBA, Doctor of Business Administration, with a focus on Supply Chain Management, Logistics, and Management Science. He has also pursued advanced studies at prestigious institutions such as Stanford University and Lawrence Technological University, further enhancing his qualifications in Project Management, Leadership, and Computer Information Systems.

Throughout his career, Dr. Zhang has demonstrated a passion for research and innovation. His current interests lie in Artificial Intelligence and Machine Learning, particularly their applications in business forecasting and project management. He has authored several publications, including books on ERP Implementation and International Logistics Operations, reflecting his commitment to sharing knowledge and advancing the field. In addition to his academic pursuits,

Dr. Zhang has amassed a wealth of professional experience in the technology industry. As a certified Database Administrator (DBA) with expertise in IBM DB2, MS SQL Server, and Oracle, he has provided consulting services to a diverse range of clients, including state government agencies and multinational corporations. His roles have involved technical support, database administration, and project management, contributing to the successful implementation of enterprise solutions and systems integration projects. With a reputation for excellence in both academia and industry, colleagues and students highly regard Dr. Zhang alike. His dedication to teaching, coupled with his extensive professional background, makes him an asset to deliver high-quality instructions.