

Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders Policy regarding non-supervised services by CSAD students.

The Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders (CSAD) at California State University Sacramento does not approve, authorize, facilitate, advocate, support, or condone undergraduate or graduate CSAD students to provide speech, language, cognitive, and/or swallowing interventions/activities to any child or adult that are considered to be consistent with or perceived as skilled intervention services outside of an official academic course, clinical practicum, formal internship, research project or any other program offered in or sanctioned by our department or any organization/entity that does not provide formal, skilled supervision by a licensed, credential speech-language pathologist.