

ONLINE Section Schedule* for NUFD Major Courses

*It is subject to change due to budget constraints. It is the students' responsibility to check the live class schedule closely for any updates before registration opens.

The Bachelor of Science in Nutrition and Food degree is primarily offered in a face-to-face format on campus. However, we now have approval to provide an online option, allowing students to complete major courses in either an online section or an in-person section.

The following online section rotations will be available alongside in-person classes during the Fall and Spring semesters. Please note that other NUFD courses required for the dietetics concentration (NUFD 116, 117, 118A, 118B, 121 and 168 (designated section for dietetics)) will only be available in-person or through hybrid delivery methods. Therefore, students pursuing a dietetics concentration cannot complete all required courses online.
