As requested annually by Academic Affairs at California State University, Sacramento (Sacramento State), this report offers a description of the Public Policy and Administration (PPA) Department's assessment activities during the 2008-09 academic year. Our annual assessments since 2006-07 have used a cycle that facilitates continuous review of the PPA Program and the maintenance of steady progress toward achieving our identified learning outcomes. In this report, we provide a brief background on the PPA approach to assessment, updated assessment measures we have gathered for the past academic year, a summary of conclusions drawn from them by faculty at our annual retreat, and a strategy for using our assessment findings in the upcoming year. This report is posted on the PPA website.

Background

The PPA Department uses a multi-pronged approach to the assessment of our Master's program toward achieving its learning goals. We base all of our assessment efforts on a matrix of program-level learning objectives (see Table 1 in the appendix). From that matrix, we have developed a series of outcomes that then map to specific objectives in all the courses we teach (see Table 3 in the appendix). Each course is responsible for covering one or more objectives, some in a primary role, others in a secondary role (as noted by a "P" or "S" in the matrix in Table 1).

Our annual assessment efforts include two summative measures: (1) an evaluation of individual course level-learning, objective outcomes to monitor course effectiveness and (2) policy memos completed by entering and finishing students to provide insight into value added by completing the entire program. Every year we hold a department retreat to review these data, draw lessons from the information, and make curricular adjustments as necessary

Updated Assessment Measures

Table 4 in the appendix offers the assignment description that we use to assess the value added gained by PPA students in the form of identifying a contemporary administrative or policy issue and the offering of alternative solutions and justifications for what they view as the “best” solution. Table 4 includes the rubric that also contains the 12 criteria that PPA full-time faculty use to evaluate the memo that students write in their first and last classes in the master’s program. Table 2 in the appendix offers the summary scores, as assigned by PPA professors reading the memo, for the 12 criteria described in Table 4.

To assess the degree of value added by the program, look at the average scores in Table 2 for each of the 12 criteria for the entering cohort as compared to the two exiting cohorts (fall 2008 and spring 2009). For all criteria, the finishing cohorts exhibited higher average numbers than the entering. This is summarized in the last column averages that measured 1.24 for the class entering in the fall of 2008, as compared to 2.02 to 1.96 for the two cohorts finishing in the fall of 2008 and spring of 2009.

Table 3 in the appendix offers each of the primary learning outcomes desired in each of the PPA core courses in the fall of 2008 and spring of 2009. In a given row is the learning outcome, the distribution of scores assigned by students in the class in the one (not accomplished) to five (excellently) categories allowed. The final row contains the average score.

To achieve an overall summary of these results it is perhaps most informative to examine the summative tables available in Table 3 in the appendix that appear at the end of the fall 2008 and spring 2009 results. The overall average for the fall of 2008 was 4.01. While in the spring of 2009 it was 3.94. This puts the PPA Department's achievement of learning objectives on average in the "very well" category.

Conclusions Drawn from Data

The data just described were made available to all full-time PPA Faculty at the Department's annual retreat on May 18, 2009. We devoted nearly three hours to a discussion that involved the instructor of a core PPA course giving a brief overview of their course and commenting on the observed scores in the achievement of primary learning goals for that course as described in Table 3 in the appendix. At the retreat, we also devoted an hour to discussing the results of our assessment of pre and post memos as summarized in Table 2 in the appendix.

Overall, we continue to be pleased with how well students are meeting our learning goals and the production of value added in the PPA Master's Program. Learning goals on average are being achieved at the "very well" (four out of five) level. This is clear evidence of value added being produced in the achievement of our degree by close to one point increases in average scores from entering to completing students. That said, we did note several categories of evaluation that are below our usual average for specific classes in the PPA core. As a group, we discussed these and determined that a combination of new instructors teaching new preps, outdated course objective descriptions, and in a few cases, reduced coverage, led to these lower scores. Based on our discussion, each instructor came away with specific ideas on how to better achieve their course's primary learning objectives in the upcoming academic year. Overall improvement measures being undertaken as a result of our discussions include a commitment to department level development of our teaching in the fall (for our two junior faculty, our core adjunct team and our existing faculty), a revision of several course objectives to better reflect current course content, and an updating of the primary/secondary assignments of objectives to courses.

The second measure we use to evaluate our program is the “assessment memo” assigned to incoming and finishing students. We updated the rubric this year, but did not find significantly different results from what we have found in the past. We continue to tinker with the prompt and scales, attempting to find a reasonable mechanism for assessing what students can do as they enter and exit the program.

The final item of note relates to our plans for next year. We have begun tracking our retention, time to graduation, and graduation rates more proactively and anticipate that we will have both historical and “baseline” data to report next year. We have recently been turning our attention to thesis completion, historically a stumbling block for students, and have had good results. We are also stepping up our front and back end advising, providing more intensive advising through the first term and second term, and then again as students prepare to begin their thesis. Finally, we are more aggressively tracking down students who have simply quit taking classes, especially those who are in the “all but thesis” category. Several of them have returned and are working to complete their thesis. One challenge is the lack of program level data from CMS. We can get reasonably good student level data but not aggregated information for our program. We look forward to kinks in that system being addressed.

Table 4: 2008-09 ASSIGNMENT DESCRIPTION AND RUBRIC FOR EVALUATION

Assignment Description: Identify a current public (governmental) problem/issue that you have some interest in and provide a decision maker with a briefing memo about the issue and possible options to deal with it. As appropriate, consider the economic, political, organizational and policy dimensions of the issue. Help the reader understand the complexities of the issue as well as how the issue may be understood differently by different groups of interested people. Be careful to distinguish between fact and opinion in your analysis. How you would recommend appropriate option(s) to deal with chosen problem/issue.

Rubric for evaluating PPA briefing memos

	Missing (Zero Point)	Included but unsatisfactory (One Point)	Satisfactory (Two Points)	Very well done (Three Points)
Critical Thinking (1) Is the problem/issue well defined? (2) Are possible options described? (3) Appropriate research design/causal inference to examine options? (4) Are implementation issues considered regarding options?		Problem/issue identified but real problems in clarity. Some options described, but not enough and/or could be stated much more clearly. Some mention of design/inference to explore options, but much improvement needed. A brief mention of implementation issues, but problems in thinking about and/or much more needed.	Problem/issue identified clearly but could be improved upon. Reasonable amount of options stated, but could be improved upon. Design/inference mentioned and a specific plan of carrying out described, but could be improved upon. Implementation issues adequately covered, but room for improvement in how described.	A full appropriate problem/issue statement included. Amount and clarity of options highly appropriate. Design/inference covered and plan to carry out is highly appropriate. Issues of implementation of options fully covered in an appropriate manner.
Integrative thinking 5) Are appropriate economic, political, economic, policy, budget, and/or administrative concepts and analyses considered?		A mention of some of these concepts, but not adequate and/or mistakenly applied.	All appropriate concepts described, but mistakes/confusion in application.	All concepts considered; little room for improvement.

Effective communication (6) Is memo well written? 7) Is previous findings and technical info appropriately presented?		Written at a minimally acceptable level. Grammatical, organization, and/or style concerns remain. Minimal previous findings and tech info, but much more needed.	Written at a basic level appropriate for someone earning a Master's degree. Still room for some minor improvements. Previous findings and tech info offered at an acceptable level, but still room for improvement.	Superb writing. No concerns and a pleasure to read. Appropriate amount of previous findings and tech info included. The issue is framed well by this inclusion.
Professional role (8) Is the role of public and/or non-profit sector appropriately recognized? (9) Does it integrate the political context? (10) Are intergovernmental dimensions appropriately considered?		Role of public/non-profit sector mentioned, but in far too little detail. The politics surrounding the chosen problem/issue are only mentioned, but covered in far too little detail. Intergovernmental dimensions are only mentioned in passing.	Public/non-profit sector role described adequately, but could improve upon and/or something left out. A serious attempt is made to integrate the political context of the problem/issue but still lacking in some way. A serious attempt is made to discuss the intergovernmental issues, but it is still lacking in some way.	Excellent coverage of these sectors in memo in a manner that fully clarifies their role. Political context is appropriately and fully described. Intergovernmental issues are appropriately covered and there is little to criticize.

Practical applications
(11) Does it describe the practical considerations to influencing the policy process?		Brief mention of practical considerations, but by far not enough.	Practical considerations are described, but still lacking in form of not fully enough or mistakes made.	Practical considerations fully described in appropriate manner and very little are left out.
(12) Is data appropriately used?		Very limited mention of data, but does little to help clarify the issue/problem.	Data is used throughout memo, but could use could be improved upon by more appropriate choices to include or application of data.	Data is integrated into the memo in a manner that helps illuminate the issue/problem and very little could be improved upon.
