

September Star Awards

Amy Yu, Academic Advising

I happily nominate Amy Yu for this month's Star award. Amy is an absolute joy to work with! She assists students with a high level of care and concern. Students often credit her for their success and have shared how relieved they felt after working with her directly regarding academic questions and concerns. When she is not helping students, she is helping her colleagues. Amy is known for quickly stepping in when staff are out sick; she takes on multiple email inquiries to ensure students are getting quality help; and she has a wealth of institutional knowledge that is critical when it comes to complex student records. Because of her strong work ethic and knowledge, Amy is known as being dependable, helpful, and a good example of teamwork. Amy embodies the true meaning of service, leadership and helps everyone around her without hesitation, and for that, I nominate her for the Star Award. She is an invaluable member of the Academic Advising community.

Tranh Pham

Tranh's work in the Pride Center has been truly remarkable. They have gone above and beyond to create an interesting and inclusive series of programs to help educate our students and faculty about LGBTQ issues. They have also made a practice of reaching out across departments and groups to help us explore our intersectionality and to connect with one another. We are so grateful for the effort they put out each and every day to make Sac State a happier, healthier more inclusive place where everyone can be valued as their authentic selves.
